ARAB REFUGEES cling to each other after safe crossing of wrecked Allenby Bridge over River Jordan. The boy and his baby brother are among thousands fleeing Israeli rule in western Jordan this week. (AP Wirephoto)

DEATH THREATS ALLEGED

Israelis Crush Arab Villages

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Palestinian refugees charged today that Israeli troops occupying the Jordan River's west bank are systematically deporting inhabitants of villages along the 1949 armistice line between Jordan and Israel.

Refugees, interviewed in their temporary quarters in an Amman school building, claimed villagers are being removed by force, intimidation and trickery.

Several refugees said they were threatened with death if they tried to return to their homes.

They said at least two villages on the western edge of the Israeli - occupied west bank region have been levelled by Israeli demolition crews and bulldozers.

Other villages were partly destroyed and some of their young men taken away by the Israeli troops, the refugees said.

CROSS TO JORDAN

Thousands of refugees have crossed into east Jordan since the ceasefire.

The villages affected are Qalqilye, an agricultural community of 12,000 about 30 miles northwest of Jerusalem, and Imwas, a village of 3,000 twelve miles west of Jerusalem.

An Israeli spokesman in Tel Aviv has denied charges that Israeli forces had evacuated Qualqilye and demolished the town. He admitted the town was badly damaged, but said this resulted from the fighting.

The spokesman also denied that Palestinian refugees were being herded across the Jordan River by Israeli soldiers.

A 75 - year - old farmer and landowner from Imwas said the Israelis tricked him and his family into leaving the village by saying they were being taken to the nearby town of Rammalah for two hours. They were not permitted to return." The farmer sneaked back and found "all the houses had been blown up, including mine."

HARD LINE HARDENS IN ISRAEL

TEL AVIV, Israel (Reuters)—Political and diplomatic moves now under way abroad to soften Israel's stand on its captured territories appeared today to have had the opposite effect.

Outwardly, the nation was marking time, awaiting the end of international deliberations in the United Nations General Assembly and between U.S. President Johnson and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

But behind the scenes plans to ensure security were being implemented.

RIVALS SPREAD TORY NET

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Three candidates for the leadership of the Progressive Conservative party dropped into Victoria today, seeking grass roots support for the September convention.

Former finance minister Donald Fleming put party unity as a paramount issue, while former agriculture minister Alvin Hamilton stressed the need of rebuilding the party into an alliance of farmers, labor and businessmen.

George Hees, the former trade minister, was to arrive this afternoon.

The visits were prompted by the meeting here of the party's national executive, planning details of the leadership convention, and a barbecue this afternoon in honor of MP George Chatterton, Esquimalt-Saanich.

UNITY FIRST

"We must achieve unity in the party at the September convention—this goal transcends all others in importance and it was this that brought me back into politics," said Mr. Fleming.

He tended to dismiss current New Democratic Party strength in public opinion polls, which earlier this year showed the NDP ahead of the Conservatives.

This pointed to "a present condition," he said, one which could be "quickly overcome" given the choice of a leader around whom the party can unite and a "clear and responsible policy for action."

TORIES GAINING

Mr. Hamilton said the NDP's "temporary" lead has disappeared but he stressed this should not result in Conservative complacency.

The Conservatives were gaining in rural Quebec while NDP strength was in the major cities. This urban strength was causing "great concern."

"I do have, I think, some ability to attract votes from the NDP that other candidates don't have," he said.

Asked why, he replied this was hard but "people say I don't sound like a Conservative."

He said the NDP will not remain for long the party of labor, and is moving into the "idealistic middle class."

"You are not going to handle idealistic people by shouting Socialism at them," he said.

NO HANDOUTS

The way to fight, he said, is to put forth more practical alternatives, away from the "handout philosophy" and towards self help programs.

He cited the Agricultural

Talks Boost Peace Hopes

Summit Resumes Sunday

GLASSBORO, N.J. (CP)—Hopes have risen for U.S.-Soviet resolve to mend frayed relations as U.S. President Johnson and Premier Kosygin of Russia talked longer than expected at a summit meeting and then scheduled a second round for Sunday.

Just how much was accomplished after more than five hours was unknown. The main areas of discussion were the Middle East, Vietnam and a treaty to curb the spread of nuclear weapons.

American officials pointed to the nuclear treaty as promising, with prospects of a draft agreement being ready soon for Geneva talks.

Also raised—but not emphasized apparently—was the question of the U.S. and the Soviet Union getting involved in a costly new nuclear missiles defences competition. Overhanging this was China's test last week of a hydrogen bomb—much sooner than expected.

MARK OF FRIENDLINESS

The friendliness exhibited by Kosygin and Johnson was marked in this first encounter between them. It was the first U.S.-Soviet summit conference since the late president Kennedy and former premier Khrushchev faced each other at Vienna in 1961.

Johnson told a Democratic group in Los Angeles that he and Kosygin had agreed they both want "a world of peace for our grandchildren."

He said: "We reached no new agreements." Then he paused and, departing from his prepared text, added, "almost, but not quite."

The air of mutual goodwill—publicly at least — contrasted with diplomatic bickering that finally led up to selection of this little college and market town as the site, midway between Washington and New York and 15 miles south of Philadelphia.

Johnson did not want to go to New York, where Kosygin has been fighting at the United Nations to salvage the Soviet position in the Middle East. Kosygin refused to come to Washington or some other suggested meeting places.

Discussions about direct bilateral relations would continue in New York next week between State Secretary Dean Rusk

REDS MASSACRE U.S. COMPANY

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese troops mauled an American infantry company in fierce battle, killing 76 and wounding 25, 60 miles north of Pleiku in the central highlands, the U.S. Command said today.

It was one of the worst U.S. defeats of the war.

Spokesmen said enemy casualties were not known. There were reports the enemy troops wore black berets.

The battered company, which included many newcomers, had just pulled out of its night defensive perimeter shortly after 7 a.m. Two platoons, a total of about 80 men, apparently became confused and disorganized and were cut off from the rest of the unit.

'IT BLEW APART'

Sabotage Eyed In Jet Crash

BLOSSBURG, Pa. (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation was asked to investigate a "strong suggestion of sabotage" Friday night after a jetliner crashed into the side of a mountain, killing the 34 persons on board.

The request of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover was made by Robert E. Peach, president of Mohawk Airlines, owner of the BAC-111 which crashed on a flight to Washington, D.C.

In a telegram to Hoover Friday night, Peach said "evidence has developed in course of notification of next of kin of crash victims which leads to strong suggestion of sabotage."

He did not give any details.

The plane, Flight 40 from Syracuse, N.Y., plunged in a ball of flames onto Blossburg Mountain in north central Pennsylvania at 2:50 p.m., shortly after it took off in overcast from Elmira, N.Y.

Residents of Blossburg, a town of 1,956, about 30 miles south of Corning, N.Y., said they could tell the airliner was in trouble as it flew over.

"It sounded like the engine kept cutting out," one man said. Louis Schultz said he saw the plane's left wing on fire and pieces of debris falling off.

PLANE DISINTEGRATES

"It was making a noise like a whistle," he said. "It was just like a toy going down sideways."

Schultz later visited the crash scene and said the fuselage was gone, "just as if someone had stuck some dynamite in the centre and blew it to pieces."

Bank of B.C. To Take Over Western Bank?

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Bank of British Columbia is considering a takeover of the troubled Bank of Western Canada, it was learned today.

Neither bank has yet opened its doors, and the Bank of B.C. is in the midst of a campaign to sell $75,000,000 in shares. (See Page 11.)

Sources also indicated the B.C. bank's share-selling campaign likely will be scaled down sharply, perhaps to $25,000,000 despite the belief of Premier Bennett it could sell $250,000,000.

A bank spokesman confirmed that "tentative discussions of a very general nature" have been held with persons connected with Westbank

But he emphasized that other groups in Western Canada also have talked to Westbank, which was granted a charter by Parliament last December and was to have opened in March.

Total value of York Lambton's holdings in Westbank is 50.4 per cent, worth about $6,500,000.

NIAGARA IMPRESSES RED LEADER

'Are There Any Fish in River?'

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP)—Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin took a look at the American and Horseshoe Falls from an excursion steamer and a high observation tower today and then asked: "Are there any fish in the river?"

Kosygin flew here on a surprise visit because, his aide said, he wanted to see one of the seven natural wonders of the world.

Shortly after his arrival in a U.S. air force jet plane from New York City, Kosygin was taken to the Prospect Point observation tower of the American Falls.

He and his party, which included Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin, descended to the base of the American Falls. Kosygin walked to the Maid of the Mist landing and waved to tourists embarking on a Lower Niagara River run to the base of the Horseshoe Falls—half in Canada and half in the United States.

It was at this point he asked whether there were any fish in the river and was informed that there were.

About 15 minutes later, a second excursion boat crossed the river from Canada and Kosygin and his party boarded it. The boat proceeded past the American Falls and to the base of the Horseshoe Falls.

Kosygin wore a rain coat with hood to protect him from spray. He did not put the hood on his head until the heavy spray from the falls drenched all aboard.

Back on shore, Kosygin rode to the top of the 218-foot observation tower and overlooked the cataracts. Through an interpreter, he was told by Mayor E. Dent Lackey of the history of the falls and how the U.S. and Canada control the water spillage over the brinks for electricity production.

Kosygin's next stop was at Prospect Point, adjacent to the American Falls. He stood at the site of a gigantic rock slide in 1954. Another smaller slide occurred to his right May 11 last.

From the falls, Kosygin drove five miles north to the Niagara Power Project, one of the largest in the world. From there he planned to lunch at a Niagara Falls restaurant.

LBJ Sparks Rioting By 10,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lines of club-holding police clashed with thousands of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators here Friday night outside a hotel where President Johnson addressed a $1,000-a-couple Democratic party fund-raising affair.

Thirty were arrested and several were injured as officers cleared the crowd from the street.

Johnson, who came in through a rear basement entrance, did not see any of the estimated 10.000 demonstrators who marched from a neargy park.

The demonstration was the result of weeks of planning by 70 anti-war groups.

The demonstrators gathered in a park about a mile from the hotel where Johnson spoke.

Some 1,500 police deployed in the hotel area.

BLOCK ENTRANCE

At 5 p.m. a crowd of about 100 blocked the hotel sidewalk. When a police officer said they were an unlawful assembly 21 lay down and had to be carried away.

Cassius Clay, who lost recognition in the U.S. of his world heavyweight boxing championship because he refused to be drafted into the U.S. Army, addressed the crowd at the park.

"Anything designed for peace and to stop the killing of people. I'm for 1,000 per cent," said Clay, who had flown in from Chicago.

The thousands massed in the park began marching on the hotel at about 7 p.m. Some hippies carried smoking sticks of incence clenched in their teeth. One girl in shorts had a live green snake around her neck.

LANDED IN LOT

Most of the marchers, with Dr. Benjamin Spock, noted pediatrician, in the van, were a few blocks from the hotel as President Johnson arrived by helicopter in a parking lot and was whisked inside.

An hour later massed police watched as some of the thousands of marchers spilled out into the street toward them.

"I command you to disperse or you will be arrested," said a police captain.

The demonstrators kept coming. Swinging clubs, police moved in and split the crowd. Fists swung. Rocks pelted the officers.

Within an hour, police had cleared the area, making 30 more arrests.

"The message is now clear," Police Chief Tom Redding said afterwards. "Lawbreakers are not going to take over this city."

'War Guilt' Balm Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver lawyers with a $1,500,000 centennial project will try this summer to remove a "real blotch on Canada's centennial conscience."

That's the price Ray McLeod and Donald Small are placing on the rights of Mr. and Mrs. Torazo Iwasaki, who had their Salt Spring Island property confiscated more than 25 years ago following their evacuation to the B.C. interior as security risks.

And the lawyers have given the Canadian government until July 20 to clear the country's conscience or face a court battle.

Shortly after Japan entered the Second World War, Iwasaki, his son and his wife were among some 20,000 West Coast Japanese moved to Greenwood as security risks.

TWO PAYMENTS

The family eventually received $13,015.99 in two payments for their 640-acre tract of land on the gulf island.

Mr. Iwasaki, now 81, came to Canada in 1901 and returned to Japan 13 years later to get married. The young couple returned to B.C. in 1918 and by 1940 had made full payment of $3,950 on their island property.

Two years later, he was given enough time to pack two suitcases before he and his wife and son were put on a train for a government holding camp for Japanese in the interior.

He was a naturalized citizen at the time.

Mr. McLeod said his client's property was placed in control of government custodian Gavin C. Mouat who died in 1961. In 1945 the land was conveyed to Salt Spring Lands Ltd. which was under the presidency of Mr. Mouat.

CHECK REFUSED

Two years later Mr. Iwasaki refused to accept a $4,932.99 cheque for the sale of his land on the northwest side of the island. He returned the cheque to the secretary of state.

After a year, he received a government reply and a cheque for the same amount which he was told to keep "because that was all he was going to get," Mr. McLeod said.

But Mr. Iwasaki continued his fight through the federal property claims commission, demanding $66,000. Mr. McLeod said his client was given $8,083.

The two Vancouver lawyers took over Mr. Iwasaki's case in January after several unsuccessful years of appeals to Victoria and Ottawa.

REAL BLOTCH

"This is a real blotch on the conscience of Canada," Mr. McLeod said. "It has been swept under the carpet for 25 years. These people staked their lives on Canada and in 24 hours were reduced to prisoners with only two handbags."

He said much of the property has been subdivided and many lots have been sold for as much as $4,000 each. He described the land value as "about $1,500,000" at present day values.

LAND COMPANY

"There was a double conveyance from the (government) custodian to the secretary of state and back to the land company, of which the custodian was president, without consulting the owner," Mr. McLeod said.

He said that if the government turns down the appeal, he will have the case filed in court by September.

"We know we have a jungle of technicalities to get through but we propose to go ahead with it."

Secretary of State Judy LaMarsh told the lawyers May 25 the case was not under her jurisdiction and that it had been referred to Registrar General John Turner.

Mr. MacLeod says he has not yet received a reply from Mr. Turner.

and Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko.

Kosygin, thanking the president for the invitation to the conference, said he had nothing to add to the statement "which I think has been very correctly drawn up."

He told more than 800 accredited reporters "I suppose you can get the impression from what the president has said that we have amassed such a great number of questions we weren't able to get through them all today."

BRIEF ITEM

Moscow radio carried only a brief comment for Russian listeners. It simply said that the two leaders met "in Glassboro, N.J., near New York" and that "the meeting was suggested by President Johnson."

Radio Peking lost no time in accusing both powers of directly planning "a great conspiracy on a worldwide basis."

At the United Nations diplomats took the continuation of the talks as in itself an encouraging sign.

It was a hot muggy day, cooled inside the 22-room old residence by 16 air conditioners installed only Thursday night.

While the president and the Soviet premier were alone, Rusk, Gromyko, defence secretary Robert McNamara and others were at work.

Differences remained on a renewed arms race in the Middle East, on solving the festering sore of more than 1,000,000 Arab refugees and for freedom of navigation in the Gulf of Aqaba.

Nor was there any evidence that the Soviets had persuaded the U.S. to halt its military escalation against North Vietnam or that the U.S. gained an inch in explaining why it is fighting in Southeast Asia.

Rehabilitation and Development Act as a move to get rural people to come together to help themselves.

For 50 years, he said, the Conservatives have been a party of businessmen, originally 500 to 600 but now five or six who wanted the party to be spokesman for the business class.

But the party needed non-Conservative votes as well to get elected and "I don't want to belong to a closed club." He pointed to his frequent meetings with prominent union officials, often left-wingers.

Just recently he had a meeting with two prominent B.C. union leaders—Roy Smith of the longshoremen and Syd Thompson of the woodworkers.

Mr. Hamilton, a personal friend and long-time political ally of Conservative leader John Diefenbaker, said he doesn't know what the chief's plans are for the leadership contest.

But he could speculate—that if the chief doesn't think any of the candidates is doing a good job pulling the party together, then he might be a candidate.

But Mr. Hamilton said he will not withdraw if Mr. Diefenbaker runs, nor if Manitoba Premier Roblin enters the race.

Stevens Leaves Prison For New Court Hearing

VANCOUVER — Homer Stevens moved from Oakalla Prison to the lawyers' table in B.C. Supreme Court chambers Friday, as yet another aspect of the complicated fishing situation began unfolding.

Owners of four Vancouver fishing boats claimed in court that the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union prevented the vessels from going halibut fishing in order to force the owners to meet union terms in a proposed trawl-fishing agreement.

The owners, represented by lawyer Glen McMaster, seek an injunction forcing the union to lift its halibut fishing ban, and also are suing the union for damages.

H. E. Hutcheon, representing the union, submitted to Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere that the owners are responsible because they locked out the halibut crews.

The judge was told the dispute arises out of stalled negotiations over the signing of an agreement to cover trawl-fishing crews who work on a share-the-catch basis. When the trawl fishing season ended, the same boats were eligible to change rigging to long-line gear for halibut.

The boats have been tied up since March.

UFAWU secretary Stevens, sentenced to a year in jail last week for contempt of court after failing to obey an earlier injunction, is appearing on his own behalf in the current injunction application. He sat Friday with lawyers Hutcheon and McMaster.

Union president H. (Steve) Stavenes and business agent Jack Nichol, both sentenced with Stevens, were given permission Friday to attend court Monday when the hearing resumes.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — UN diplomats believe the overriding issue, both here and at Glassboro, New Jersey, where President Johnson and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin are engaging in summitry, is this:

What combination of inducements and pressures—if any—could produce a fundamental modification of Soviet policy toward the Mideast?

Without a Soviet switch from support of the Arabs to even-handed peacemaking, diplomats here do not see how there can be much ahead for the Holy Land except continued tension, bitterness and competitive rearmament—perhaps, this time, in the nuclear-weapon field.

And at the end, another war.

Given Soviet co-operation, UN people believe much might become feasible.

For example:

- Dispatch of a high-level UN mediator. Romanian Premier Ion Gheorghe Maurer, taking a carefully balanced position between the Arabs and Israel Friday and urging negotiations, appeared to be bidding for the role.

- Revival and expansion of UN peacekeeping. More and more delegates, including on Friday Canadian External Affairs Minister Paul Martin, have been urging the formation of substantial demilitarized zones in areas which it is hoped will be evacuated by Israeli troops. The zones would then be patrolled by UN observers.

- Curbs on the Mideast arms race. Nothing could prevent China from resupplying the Arabs, if Russia refused to do so; but a Soviet-American agreement at Geneva on nuclear nonproliferation would help put pressure on both Arabs and Israel to stay away from atomic weapons.

"We agreed it is very important to reach agreement on a nonproliferation treaty," President Johnson said of his meeting with Kosygin Friday.

- Pressure on the Arabs to accept Israel's existence and negotiate at least a modus vivendi with her. Some reports suggest that Soviet Presient Nikolai V. Podgorny already is in Cairo for this purpose. Maurer urged it Friday.

There are, it is believed here, rational motives impelling the Kremlin toward a new Mideast policy. These motives must compete, it is recognized, with temptations to continue exploiting Arab anger at the West.

What Western and some neutralist delegates hope to see is a "Mideast Tashkent," an effort by the Kremlin to ease Arab-Israeli antagonism as it sought in 1965-66 to help end Indo-Pakistani warfare.

The overriding motive at Tashkent, diplomats generally agree, was desire to keep Chinese influence out of the Indian subcontinent. The Indo-Pakistani conflict had opened opportunities for Peking.

The same basic motive now exists, at least in embryo, in the Mideast, it is pointed out.

China—seeking a foothold at the crossroads of three continents—is scorning Moscow for allegedly having abandoned the Arabs, and is implying it is ready to come to their aid. Some reports say it has already begun to do so.

Not all of this is bluff and bluster, it is felt here, although China is some considerable distance from the Mideast and its available resources for military aid are not abundant.

Peking could, for one thing, provide UAR President Gamal Abdel Nasser nuclear weapons, it is pointed out. China exploded its first hydrogen bomb just before the current UN General Assembly opened.

STRIKING POWER

Common fear of China—an enemy, or potential enemy, of both, with nuclear striking power—is considered largely responsible for such progress as there has been in recent years toward an East-West detente in Europe, in the area of nuclear testing, and in outer space.

Diplomats here do not see any reason why the same motive could not impel Russia to join with the West in mutual protection from a Chinese threat near the Soviet Union's southern frontier.

Meanwhile if a Chinese stick is goading Moscow in the direction of a "Mideast Tashkent," a carrot luring her in that direction is believed to be desire for an advantageous Vietnam settlement.

France, with what she believes is a good "feel" for Soviet policy, insists there can be no Mideast peace until Vietnam is settled.

The implication is that Moscow will not co-operate with the West in the Mideast until it can do so without the embarrassment of "collaborating" with what Peking constantly reminds her is the "imperialist enemy" in the Far East.

PACKAGE DEAL

Just how intimate a link there is, in Russia's eyes, between the two crises—whether, for example, Kosygin wants a specific package deal involving disguised American withdrawal from Vietnam—is not known here. Or if it is known, no one is saying.

The UN, however, is watching Glassboro with great interest. The results could determine whether the current assembly continues to be sound and fury, or whether it does some real peacemaking between Arab and Jew.

Medicare Plans Will Go Ahead PM Warns MDs

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson said Friday night it is senseless to rail against forces directed at ensuring equality of opportunity as leading to socialism and state control.

"On the contrary, I believe the social welfare progress we have made strengthens the foundations of our private enterprise system by broadening the whole basis of our prosperity and making our system more just and fair, more supportable by all Canadians," he said.

Mr. Pearson acknowledged in an address delivered to the closing banquet of the Canadian Medical Association that many in the medical profession do not agree with the course of action being followed by the government on medical care insurance.

But he made it plain the government has no intention of abandoning social welfare measures such as medical care insurance, even if it rides roughshod over old ideas and some old institutions.

"I believe that medicare, the Canada Pension Plan, the Canada Assistance Plan, and other social welfare measures do not destroy the individual by helping him to meet essential human needs and to develop his capacities to the fullest extent.

"If this limits freedom of enterprise or any other kind of personal freedom, it is only in the sense that the ethical and professional standards imposed by your own medical associations on their members limit their freedom. It is limitation in the interest of progress and improvement."

Mr. Pearson's address was received in polite silence except for laughter at a few warm-up jokes. When he concluded most of the audience stood to applaud but possibly one-third remained seated.

Mr. Pearson said Canada is moving toward a higher, more compassionate, more enduring civilization which will succeed in finding the right balance between individual freedom and social responsibility.

NEED CO-OPERATION

Success "will be gained only by co-operation rather than conflict. . . ."

"All the different interests in our population must give priority to the general welfare, as opposed to the particular, the sectional or the occupational good. . . .

"Medicare, like so many other government programs, is an effort in political balancing—an attempt to balance the freedom of doctors to manage their own professional activities, which is essential or we will run out of doctors, against the social responsibility of any truly civilized country to provide equal medical treatment to all its citizens."

Mr. Pearson said it would be fatal not to adapt thinking and institutions to the dramatic emergence of science and technology.

"It is futile to resist these changes or their application to society."

CHURCH PARLEY

Paroled Murderer Keeps Mum

EUGENE, Ore. (AP)—One of a thousand persons attending the Church of the Brethren's world conference prefers to remain just a face in the crowd.

His name, however, is known to millions—Nathan Leopold.

In 1924, Leopold and his friend, Richard Loeb, murdered 14-year-old Bobby Franks in Chicago. The murder and their trial in which they were defended by Clarence Darrow, is one of the most famous U.S. crime cases of the 20th century.

But Leopold won't talk about it. In fact, he told a reporter who found him in the crowd Friday that he didn't wish to comment on any subject.

Leopold was parolled from an Illinois prison in 1958, after serving 33 years. He later was granted a pardon.

EXAMPLE OF REHAB

After his parole, he went to work for the Brethren Service Commission in Puerto Rico. He is credited with helping combat tropical parasites and leprosy, and his case is often used as an example of penal system rehabilitation.

Leopold still lives in Puerto Rico, where he now is director of research for the Puerto Rico department of health. In 1961, he married the widow of a doctor in San Juan.

He is still a member of the Jewish faith, despite his work with the Church of the Brethren. In addition to his book, Life Plus 99 Years, he has written a number of scientific articles.

Youth Fined $100 For Driving Under Suspension

Larry Lund, 19, of 440 Linden, Friday was fined $100 for driving while disqualified.

He admitted the offence when he appeared in central court this morning.

Fined $35 each for careless driving were Robert Prizeman, 2859 Austin; Kenneth Young, 1959 Richardson.

Commissioner Attends Parade

St. John Ambulance, Victoria branch, will hold its annual church parade at St. Matthias' Anglican Church Sunday at 11 a.m.

The provincial commissioner, J. D. Taggart, QC, commander brother of the Order of St. John, will read the first lesson.

The second will be read by Ernest J. Harwood, officer brother of the order. Mr. Taggart will present awards to members.

Canon Jack Rogers, assisted by Rev. Angus Cameron of Lundavra, will conduct the service.

SYRIA FORCES SUFFER 2,000 CASUALTIES

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Syrian armed forces suffered more than 2,000 casualties during the recent Arab war with Israel, Syria's Information Minister Mohamed Zouhbi said today.

In the first official account of Syria's casualties, Zouhbi said 20 officers and 125 other men were killed and 98 officers and 1,500 men wounded. In addition, 300 soldiers were wounded by napalm attacks, Zouhbi said.

Gov't Fails in Bid For Recess Agreement

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Negotiations to try to bring Parliament to a close for a summer recess on June 30, or one week later, have broken down, it was learned here today.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen attempted this past week in meetings with opposition House leaders to reach an agreement. But after a strenuous session Friday, no agreement was reached and the minister indicated the House would carry on until July 7 at the earliest before quitting for the summer.

From the government's point of view this will have the beneficial effect, at least, of ensuring that a number of members of Parliament are on hand for the big Dominion Day birthday party in the nation's capital.

Queen Elizabeth will address a joint assembly of the Commons and Senate on the front lawn of Parliament on July 1.

Accept our thanks . . .

On behalf of the Victoria Gizeh Temple Shrine Club I would like to publicly thank the merchants and General Public who so generously supported our recent Shrine Circus.

At the Top

PRESIDENT JOHNSON IS REported to have said that he was willing to go an extra mile in the cause of world peace, and in the end he went 18 miles farther than Mr. Kosygin to reach the summit-meeting site at Glassboro, New Jersey. But what appalled the general public was the jockeying that went on prior to agreement on the meeting between the two leaders—the coyness and manoeuvring that for many hours kept a waiting world in tension as each leader jousted at long range to save face and reap some advantage of strategy.

With so much at stake, it may well have been that the mounting concern of the people was transmitted to the leaders: it became increasingly evident that regardless of the possible dangers of an unsuccessful meeting, it would be even more dangeous not to meet.

The last two efforts at direct contact between Soviet and American top level spokesmen were almost catastrophic. The imminent meeting of President Eisenhower and Mr. Khrushchev in Paris was shattered by the U-2 spy plane scandal. The confrontation of Mr. Khrushchev and President Kennedy in Vienna proved to be a grim measurement of strength on each side that did little to reassure the world at the time that peace was a sure prospect.

The Glassboro talks indicate a pleasanter atmosphere so far. But the suggested topics are as tough as any that have confronted the leaders of the two major powers. The Middle East settlement, Vietnam, the spread of nuclear weapons, the threatened anti-ballistic missile armaments race—these are topics fraught with thorny difficulties and danger.

There are current efforts — notably in hints from France—to tie in Vietnam with the Middle East problem so that a settlement of one might be used in bargaining for concessions in the other. There are large loopholes in the stand of both nations in regard to the Middle East, and compromise is still a good possibility in that area. Less flexibility exists in the respective Vietnam stands, but even here each side could quote former statements that were broad enough to permit an easing of policy without too apparent a change of direction.

What was said at Glassboro on Friday and may be said on Sunday at least gives the world encouragement: the two men whose leadership could mean the difference between war and peace are at least in communication—and communication can lead to understanding, understanding to agreement.

History has conditioned us not to expect too much from summit conferences. But at this moment of world crisis, what eventuates from the talks in a little New Jersey college town could set the course of our lives for a long time to come.

No Place to Hide

CHINA'S TESTING OF A hydrogen bomb could have the effect of finishing off the resistance of the Johnson administration to the construction of a full anti-missile system for the United States. The pressures on the President and on Defence Secretary McNamara are primarily political and on two levels.

The first is the public fear, reflected in Congress, of being left vulnerable to attack. The second is the prospect of what some $40 billions in aero-space industry contracts — the estimated cost of an ABM defence—would mean to the economies of a great number of Congressional districts. Both the Pentagon and the defence industry lobbies have been feeding both the fear and the greed in numerous legislative hearings.

There is hardly a person in Washington who doesn't believe that the proponents of an anti-missile system will get at least part of what they are seeking, and the implications for Canadian defence policy in this are grave.

The likelihood of Canada's being able to afford the cost of a shelter system adequate to protect the major population centres seems slight. The estimated cost is about $400 millions each for cities the size of Vancouver, Montreal and Toronto. For Canada to get into the business of defending against enemy missiles—and this must be one of the matters to be discussed when the North American Air Defence agreement comes up for renewal next spring—would at least double the cost. It has been estimated that to defend and shelter one city in each province would require about $10 billions or almost seven times the current annual expenditure on defence.

Spending on this scale, for such minimal defence, can hardly be seriously considered by this country. But the situation does emphasize the need for us to double our efforts to promote the cause of peace and understanding in the world, to aid the cause of poverty-stricken nations and work to bring all countries, particularly China, into the world community. Canadians should be prepared to spend more on this kind of program, bearing in mind the heavy expense and near-futility of the alternative.

They Acted for Canada

IN THE AGONIZED AND CONfusing discussion of Middle Eastern problems, it is gratifying to note the unanimity of Canada's elected representatives in their Commons endorsement of this country's quick effort to ease the physical suffering of the victims of the war.

Prime Minister Pearson's announcement that $2.5 millions in food, two-fifths of it wheat flour, was already moving to relief of Palestinian refugees, and those in Arab countries suffering from the conflict, and that, as an emergency measure, the government had already matched an initial grant of $20,000 from the Canadian Red Cross Society to its international committee for medical supplies, was quickly applauded by leaders of opposition parties. Spokesmen claimed the action would meet ready approval throughout the nation.

Canada's role as a peace-maker may be misunderstood or misrepresented in certain countries. Our recognition and response to the needs of those requiring life-giving essentials cannot be misconstrued. If more is necessary, it is reasonable to expect that Canada will do its share to provide additional help.

This is a course of action, taken without weighing faults or virtues, solely to sustain the chance of life for those in critical distress — and taken because it was right.

To Avoid Eyesores

ALDERMAN ROBERT BAIRD should be given support for his proposed resolution to the Union of B.C. Municipalities seeking a curb on unsightly commercial development along highways in the province.

British Columbia long ago eliminated billboards from the highways and is combating litter. Mr. Baird's proposal would restrict eyesore development, which he says is now spoiling many parts of our highways, and call for more attractive thoroughfares. It represents a move which is long overdue, for commercial development should not necessarily mean ugliness, nor should it preclude the use of screening in this well-treed country.

Unwarranted

The best you can hope, reading the front page of your second section of June 17, is that Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Courtney Haddock was misquoted or his words taken out of context when you read "We went through it with the Hungarian freedom fighters ... they were kooks."

Whether or not Canada accepts Palestinian Arab refugees, such a description of men and women of all ages who were prepared to die in the cause of freedom as were so many Hungarians is unwarranted, in bad taste, and false. — Oak Bay.

The Lone Wolf

I have read Walter Gordon's books re percentage of Canadian industry owned by Americans, and I am heartily in accord with his ideas. However, he is politically inept and can't seem to put his ideas across. In 1964, I personally (and also his colleagues) suggested he seek and follow the advice of trained senior civil servants. He was very courteous, but he didn't follow the advice. The result was the mess re the American investor tax, the 11 per cent sales tax, the tax on machinery, and his naive speech on Vietnam. The cabinet fears his impulsiveness and his lone wolf habits.

He seems to be the only one who recognizes the implication of American domination of our industry and labor unions.—M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra.

A Few Hopeful Possibilities in the Mid-East

THE diplomatic donnybrook which has followed the six-day Mideast war has seemed, at first glance, to be producing little hope of a new and stabler order in the Middle East. Its principle constructive function has seemed to be that of a political safety valve. But between the flying fists and the thud of diplomatic shillelaghs, there could be discerned—if one looked closely—a few hopeful gestures. Looking ahead to the middle and more distant future, the war may yet open up unexpected opportunities.

Frye

For example:

A new UN peace force: Virtually every critical comment on the "hasty" withdrawal of UNEF, the former UN peace army in Egypt, has carried the implication that if it had not been withdrawn, the war might have been prevented. Whether this is so or not, the widespread belief that it is true is a backhanded tribute to the effectiveness of UNEF while it was on the spot.

More and more voices—notably, this past week, that of Premier Jens Otto Krag of Denmark—are being raised for its revival, under conditions that would make impossible another sudden ouster.

A few short weeks ago, a new UN force seemed utterly inconceivable. It is still not likely. But if the present trend continues, it could become possible.

The Mideast arms race: Both Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin and President Johnson have now deplored the costs and perils of this deadly race, and said they wanted to end it.

This is easier said than done. Kosygin's government has committed itself to refurbish, at least in part, the shattered Arab armies. But if the Soviet premier means what he says, the commitment to the Arabs is not open-ended.

There is more urgency to this problem than may appear. Another frantic arms race could find both Israel and the Arabs each seeking, and obtaining, nuclear weapons.

The refugees: World attention once again has been centred on the poignant human cost of war in the Holy Land. Thus aroused, it is possible that diplomats will, at long last, do something tangible about it.

The task is simpler now, in one respect: the barrier between hundreds of thousands of refugees and their former homes is no longer an international frontier. To repatriate them would no longer require of the Arab states implied recognition of Israel; it could be done, as a practical matter, by Israel, acting alone.

Southern Arabia: The decimation of U.A.R. armies must have tipped the balance of military power dramatically in Yemen and Aden. Reports are scant, but it is difficult to believe that President Nasser has been able physically to maintain his momentum there.

Whereas a few short weeks ago, therefore, Nasser's terrorists were fanatically opposed to pacification by the UN, it seems reasonable to assume that now, faced with defeat, they will be more amenable.

The Syrian-Israeli frontier: Like it or not—and the Arabs definitely do not like it—the Israeli seizure of the Golan plateau in Syria has produced a more stable frontier, erasing several serious sources of tension.

No longer will Syrian guns glare down from the hillside at Israeli kibbutzim in the northern Jordan valley. No longer will Israeli fishermen on the Sea of Galilee be under fire from the eastern shore. No longer will the Arabs be able to divert the principal headwaters of the Jordan.

It is an imposed solution, and like all such solutions, it has its elements of injustice. But it is an answer, and it is not likely to be rolled back.

This should logically open up new opportunities for the UN Truce Supervision Organization to operate more normally in the area. The principal reason for Israel's boycott of the Syrian-Israel Mixed Armistice Commission—dissatisfaction over handling of the demilitarized zone—is now largely academic.

It might even conceivably be feasible, in the more distant future, to reopen the question of co-operative water-sharing in the Jordan valley. The Syrians, who sabotaged agreement a decade ago, will now have only two practical choices: to agree, or to go without.

The Soviet diplomatic stance: There are few public signs of a shift by Moscow, and no shift may ever come. But with its previous policy in shambles, it would be logical for the Kremlin to have a whole new look at the problems of the area.

Kosygin said this past week that the Israelis, like all other peoples, had a right to independent national existence. As Russia knows full well, this doctrine is an anathema to the Arabs. Its utterance could have been a warning that Moscow is not necessarily, for all time, in the Arabs' pocket.

Every such opportunity in the Mideast could be matched by a challenging new problem. But it is at least something that, after years of total rigidity, the pieces in the kaleidoscope should have been so thoroughly scrambled.

FROM QUEBEC CITY

By STAN McDOWELL

Breaking the Hobbles on French-Canadian Education

IN 1951 only 30 per cent of Quebec's population between 15 and 19 years was still in school. Even that figure, lowest in Canada, made the situation of French-speaking youth of the province look better than it was. Among English-speaking Quebec people, school attendance has been high. For the French-speaking alone the percentage would have been less than 30. Among those between 10 and 14 the picture was a little better. Percentage in school was 89.5. But this again was the lowest in Canada.

McDowell

It was as high as it was only because compulsory education, up to the age of 14, had finally been enacted under the reform government of Adelard Godbout in 1943.

Attempts to bring in compulsory education, once in the late 19th century, and three times in the early 20th, had all been defeated.

The effects of this low rate of school attendance survive. Even today, 43 per cent of Quebec people between the ages of 25 and 30 have seven years' schooling or less.

Hampered

This educational record, its effects on the population of Quebec, and the philosophy responsible for it, hobble the efforts being made today to build an effective, modern school system in Quebec.

The unwelcome legacy shows up in many ways. A poorly educated labor force holds back the economy and narrows the base on which taxes are raised to pay for school reform. Qualified teachers are in short supply. Many members of the more than 1,300 school commissions simply do not have the education themselves to understand or cope with the problems they face.

While the English Protestant minority has had its own public school system leading on to university—and the minority's right to its own school has been scrupulously respected by the majority — the heart of the French Roman Catholic system has been the classical college, reserved for those whose parents could pay the fees.

The school system that prevailed up the present day, and is not entirely gone yet, was a modified version of the system established in 1856. There were public elementary schools up to Grade 7 originally. Later Grades 8 and 9, called "complementary primary school," were added in the public sector. After 1929 school commissions could, if they desired, provide a further stage, Grades 10, 11 and sometimes 12, called "superior primary."

But it was not until 1961 that the school commissions were required to provide education up through Grade 11 and, until then, many did not. In any case, for those wanting unrestricted access to higher education, the classical college was the normal route, after Grade 7.

The classical college provided an eight-year course, leaning strongly toward Latin, Greek and philosophy leading to a diploma called the "Baccalaureate of Arts." This "BA" was granted by a university with which the college was affiliated.

This classical college "B.A." is something of a hybrid. What it most resembles is the baccalaureate, or "Bachot" granted by the lycees of France, which is in effect a very superior form of prolonged secondary school.

The classical college "B.A." has been the only way into most university faculties and, until this year, was a prerequisite for admission to such traditional professions as medicine and the law.

This created something of a cul de sac at the end of the public secondary school for the great majority of children, whose parents could not afford the heavy expense of eight years' fees to a classical college.

There were some other outlets: trade schools to be entered after Grade Nine, technical institutes to be entered after Grade 11, normal schools to be entered after Grade 11. (Before 1953 girls would go into convent normal schools after Grade Nine.)

There were also family institutes for girls, residential schools where girls learned domestic science, or acquired the diploma required to teach in family institutes.

Some university faculties, such as science, engineering and commerce—all of them slow to be established in the French-language universities—were open to graduates of the public secondary school.

Block to Teachers

But the disadvantages of having the public secondary school diploma, rather than the classical college "B.A." can be illustrated by the problems they create for a student who goes into teaching.

After his 11th year he can take two years of normal school and get his B certificate, or four years to get his A certificate. But after that he is effectively blocked in a profession in which progress depends largely on improving one's qualifications.

There have recently been modifications of this system. Since 1954 the first four years of the classical college course have been offered in some public high schools. Classical college fees, in the first four grades, have recently been paid in part from public funds. And the old classical college course itself has been drastically changed.

Still the glaring difference between public and private secondary schools, and the uncertain connections between secondary school and university, have narrowed the choices open to students and condemned many of them to go onto the labor market ill-prepared.

In contrast with this traditional system of education in Quebec, the new one, about to start, attempts to provide the widest possible degree of choice and flexibility, and something closer to a real equality of opportunity.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

When you are at Miracle Beach, go for a walk along the top of the beach and then work down to the water's edge. There are very many things to see.

On the high beach, sprayed by the salt water only during a storm in winter, you will find plants adapted to existence under these condition, such as sand verbena and one of the pink morning glorys, as well as several varities of the pea family.

Here the rice grass with its sharp, bluish leaves, grows in abundance and often a tangle of the creeping blackberry thrives.

Now go down the beach, scrambling over the old drift logs. Stop to examine some of them. Can you tell, now the bark has been peeled off by the wave action, just what they are? Along the beach there is an old log with its roots reaching ten feet in the air in a network of root-branches. Examine the old trunk. See the huge limbs that once grew there and how it has produced two lead trunks and then divided again and sent up three leads.

This old tree must have lived in the open and perhaps was over five hundred years old when it became uprooted — maybe at the mouth of some river or perhaps on an island.

Move on down a little more and you will find the glasswort growing on the sand-mud patches. Stop and search among the bits of seaweed. There you will find some of the little beach crabs which at once scuttle for shelter. There will be a number of the tiny "beach-fleas" which belong to the crustaceans. They too, will seem to almost fly as they dart away.

Walk down toward the tide flow: you will be able to pick up some of the sand dollars and the empty shell of the sea urchin. Do you know that both of these animals are related to the star fish?

Stop and look at the ripples in the sand. The ripples you see today will never be the same again. Every tide leaves its own mark on the sand.

The Return to the Holy Places

By MEYER LEVIN

(Mr. Levin is the author of "Compulsion," "The Fanatic," "My Father's House," "The Old Bunch" and "Yehuda.")

After 20 years of exclusion from some of the most holy places of Judaism in Jerusalem and other parts of the Jordanian sector of Palestine, Israelis are celebrating their return. Here while an Israeli soldier mounts guard, the Harvest Festival is observed in front of the Wailing Wall, last remnant of the Temple built by King Solomon.

HEBRON, Israeli-occupied Jordan — On Mount Sinai where the Torah was given to Moses, a rabbi celebrated the event — in a Christian monastery.

At Abraham's burial cave in Hebron, busloads of ultra-pious Hasidim fervently uttered Hebrew prayers before the tombs of the patriarchs—in a mosque.

At the site of the Temple in Jerusalem, hundreds of thousands of Jews arrive in pilgrimage outside the remnant of a stone wall, while inside the mosques atop the wall, Moslems have resumed their devotions.

Thus, the paradox of the great religions in the Holy Land. Or the hope.

During all the years when the world expressed concern for free access to the Holy Places, it was rarely realized that the Jews, whose faith was at the origin of these sanctified sites, were still barred from worshipping in their holiest places of all.

Today, for the first time since the fall of the Temple, Sinai, Jerusalem, and Hebron are open to them.

High Emotions

The most violent emotions are evoked over the Holy Places, many of man's most brutal wars were fought over them, yet these sites are themselves the symbol of the close relationship of the three great religions and, one cannot help pointing out, of the parenthood of Judaism.

Let me hasten to say there is no dream of replacing St. Katharine's Monastery on Mount Sinai with a synagogue, nor of rebuilding the Temple on the site of the Dome of the Rock, nor of replacing Hebron's Mosque of the Caves with a Jewish memorial. But the amazing fact of Jewish prayers at St. Katharine's and in the Hebron Mosque has passed virtually unnoticed in the speedy events of the war, though it is the most hopeful sign of a new understanding in the Holy Land.

If three faiths believe in the One God, if three faiths preach goodness and peace, can they not be hospitable instead of hostile toward each other?

Untouched by War

The Jewish ceremony on Mount Sinai was held on the eve of Shevuoth, the very holiday dedicated to the giving of the Torah. Chief Rabbi Goren of the Israel Defence Forces, with a small party, was flown to the mountain, which rises stark and awe-inspiring out of the desert, in an area so remote that even with the swirling war, no troops were nearby.

The mountain on which Moses, by tradition, received the commandments has immemorially been known as Jebel Musa; it's monastery was founded in the sixth century. The area was among the first conquered by the Moslem sword, but the monastery was tolerated and its ancient library survived. Visitors have been few in this inaccessible place; they had to be hoisted in a basket to the summit.

Rabbi Goren's group arrived by plane. When the ram's horn was blown from Mount Sinai, it's stutterlike cry, always new, like some inner truth breaking out through every resistance, sounded out into the desert night, and pierced, on radio waves, into every home in Israel.

Now the Hasidim, and the kibbutz-nicks in their wake, and soldiers with their families, and Tel Avivians, and everybody who could wangle a pass — and who in Israel doesn't have a "connection" — hurried into the arched chambers of the beautifully carpeted mosque of Hebron.

In one hall, behind an iron grille, stood the large stone tombs marked, with hastily lettered Hebrew placards, "Isaac" and "Rebecca." In another great chamber, "Jacob" opposite "Leah," for Rachel's tomb is by the roadside near Bethlehem. And across a courtyard in still another prayer hall, "Abraham" and "Sara."

Before each tomb, a cluster prayed, while the less religious looked on with strange expressions, sometimes as at a curiosity, sometimes almost of envy.

Before the tomb of Abraham, one young Hasid appeared to be in hypnotic oblivivion. His open prayer-book pressed tightly against his face, he rocked, swayed, with a fervor as though to transfer his soul into the tomb itself.

Actually, the tombs are symbolic, standing, the Moslems say, directly above the real tombs which are still in the cave-cellar of the mosque. There is a locked lid to a cylindrical descent. Perhaps, in time, authentication of the tombs may be attempted. So strong is the tradition of the Cave of the Mach-Pelah, that it is probably the true place.

Here, within the mosque, day after day, come Jews to pray. Outside, the buzzing bazaar continues; within two days there was not a souvenir left to buy in the shops, not a Pepsi-Cola in all the west bank of the Jordan.

"Come, have a coffee," Arabs invited Jews. "You must come back, bring your friends, buy things!" For in this town it was already clear that prosperity was arriving.

Without cynicism one could say that if God had been dead or asleep, he seems to have awakened and to be ready to smile on his Holy Land, if only his three-way worshippers will accept that their different paths led from, and lead back to, the same shrines, and that "holy wars" are wars nevertheless, and need only be abandoned, for a peace of good will to reign.

And the Arabs' Thirst For Revenge Is Strong

By IRENE BEESON

CAIRO — Passing from war to cease fire has been for the Egyptians like waking from a nightmare only to find that the monsters of reality are even worse than those in the dream. After five days of bloody fighting the Arab-Israeli problem is more menacing than ever before.

The war launched by Israel to reconquer the use of the Tiran Strait and the Gulf of Aqaba developed into a war of conquest and today Israel has grown in size to three times the area it covered two weeks ago. Arab hatred of the Israelis and their supporters has grown in proportion.

The Arab thirst for revenge is stronger now than it was at the height of the crisis which resulted, last month, from Nasser's reoccupation of Sharm el Sheikh, at the mouth of the Gulf. Many Egyptians are asking for fighting to be resumed now and pursued until the defeat and humiliation of last week are rubbed out.

Soviet and Eastern bloc countries' sanctions against Israel are meaningless, they say. They do no believe that Israel and her Western supporters can be defeated by Arab economic blockade. This is a double-edged knife which can hurt the Arab countries as much or more than it will affect the West.

As far as Egypt is concerned it will mean the loss of most of her revenues from the Suez Canal, which were expected to reach $300 million this year. Seventy-five per cent of traffic through the waterway is taken up by oil tankers of which the greater part ply between the Middle East and Britain and the U.S.A. Several of the oil-producing Arab countries, like Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Libya, depend almost entirely on sales of oil to the Western countries for their revenues.

The war cannot be won with economic weapons, many Egyptians are saying, neither can the question of "Occupied Palestine" — aggravated by Israeli conquest last week of sections of Arab territory — be solved by negotiation. The Israeli proposal to have direct negotiations with Arab leaders is unacceptable. The United Nations: "They have failed us in the past and we don't expect a change of heart there now or in the future." War, a continuation of the war in which they lost the first battle, is the only way out.

They expect a great deal from Algerian President Boumedienne's recent visit to the Soviet Union. The Soviet Union will, they believe, rebuild Egypt's lost air force by sending MiG aircraft to Algeria and there are rumors that a Unified Arab Army will be placed under Algerian command for the next battle. Algeria is still in a state of war with Israel and has refused the cease-fire.

China's attitude to Egypt is also a source of optimism. Her offer this week of 150,000 tons of wheat and $10 million dollars "without strings" and without stipulation of terms and delays for repayment is taken to mean that she has now openly entered the Middle East political arena. "Nasser will not play China off against the Soviet Union, as he played off the U.S.A. against the Soviet Union in the past" some observers are saying.

Back to Normal

In the meantime, life in Cairo is, on the surface, returning to normal. The black-out is now an unpleasant memory. Cairo airport has begun to operate again in a small way, black market dealers are back on the streets again en masse.

Enthusiasm over Nasser's decision to stay in power has given way to quiet sadness. Men from the forces are beginning to return home with horrifying stories of the war.

Neighbors and friends tell heartbreaking tales of husbands, brothers and friends arriving back in Cairo in a pitiable state, after walking halfway across the Sinai Peninsula to Ismalia in the broiling heat, without food or drink.

Nurses and doctors say the large hospitals are full of wounded. The papers say that 100 doctors who were studying or working in Germany have been asked to fly home immediately to help in the emergency.

The real meaning of Israel's lightning thrust is beginning to dawn on Cairenes for whom before it had meant only a few days discomfort.

'Citizens Plus' — a Concept To Help Canada's Indians

By ART STOTT

Stott

Among the recommendations in the introductory pages of "A Survey of the Contemporary Indians of Canada—Economic, Political, Educational Needs and Policies," edited by H. B. Hawthorn, appears a brief proposal that Indians be considered "citizens plus."

I take this to mean that they should enjoy the rights of full citizenship, and, in addition, their special privileges as Indians under their particular act, which should be suitably amended.

There are several arguments to support this case. The strongest, in my opinion, is that the majority of Indians, through poverty, lack of opportunity, educational deficiencies, conscious or unconscious discrimination against them by the white population, and other factors, are in no position to take advantage of all the rights of citizenship. They need to be helped along to a position in which they are capable of exercising such rights for their own benefit, and of enjoying the fruits of that exercise.

★ ★ ★

But, as I understand the concept, they should not be deprived of anything they have now. They should not be pressed into conformity in the white civilization of Canada. They should not be made to accept the cultural values which appeal to other residents of the land. No effort should be made to force upon them principles or practices which they consider inferior to principles and practices that are traditionally their own. The effort, it seems, would be to permit them to retain ethnic identity and culture as part of the mosaic of Canada without prejudice to their improvement physically, economically, and educationally by wide open and inviting access to the institutions available to, and used by, the white population.

"Citizens plus" implies privileged status. And as a means of compensating for the Indians' underprivileged position that has developed over so many years in Canada, it doesn't seem unreasonable.

Most of us are not sufficiently informed on human nature to decide how this extension of privilege could be granted without injury to the pride, self-respect or self-reliance of the recipient. The operation of the principle of "citizen plus" would be delicate indeed. Because application of the theory would not be easy does not mean, though, that it can't be done.

Furthermore, the survey makes the point that the costs involved would be far from prohibitive since the number of Indians represents only about one per cent of the total Canadian population.

How would the white residents of Canada react to the idea of "citizen plus" for a fraction of the population? In my opinion, those of good will would respond favorably, even though they realize that the outside demands being made on their personal incomes—demands including higher taxes—are making them "citizens financially minus." There seems no end to the number of people and agencies ready to spend the ordinary Joe's money for him.

But there are a couple of attractions for other Canadians in the plan proposed for Indians and the financial demands that would be involved. In the first instance, few of us can be happy about the position in our society held by the Indian—we can't quite escape the idea that the descendants of people who were in this country before us haven't been given a fair shake. Any public funds dispersed to them automatically carry an aura of conscience money. And as other Canadians provide the means to help Indians up from poverty and inability to take advantage of opportunities, perhaps the white Canadians would also acquire "citizenship plus."

The significant question, as I see it, is: Will the plan work for the achievement of the objective toward which it is aimed?

Citizenship, as I understand it, confers benefits and, as a balancing factor, imposes obligations. If special privileges remove, or reduce, the obligations, is the result "citizenship plus" or "citizenship minus" in terms of social development?

Delinquent A Product Of Wealth

By JOHN P. MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON — Alarming rises in juvenile delinquency in wealthy nations may be a sign of a "revolution of rising expectations" among the young, a task force report for the National Crime Commission has suggested.

Groping for an explanation of youth crime in affluent societies, crime commission consultant Jackson Toby of Rutgers University concluded: "Poverty cannot cause crime but resentment of poverty can, and, curiously enough, resentment of poverty is more likely to develop among the relatively deprived of a rich society than among the objectively deprived in a poor society."

Toby, a sociologist, found that the United States shares the vexing delinquency problem with other industrialized nations with large cities. His findings were part of a 428-page supplement to the commission's "War on Crime" report issued in February.

"The revolution of rising expectations is both cause and effect of the soaring ownership of automobiles, television sets and radios" in developed nations all over the world, Toby said.

He said his studies indicated that "people steal, not because they are starving, but because they are envious, and they are more likely to be envious of the possessions of others in countries with rising standards of living."

Expect More

Luxury-producing industrial societies distribute goods more democratically than agrarian societies, only to generate expectations of still greater equality, Toby said.

Although feelings of deprivation "do not inevitably lead to crime," Toby said affluence "not only arouses predatory motives but gives the potential predator some prospect for getting away with it." He said part of the explanation is the breaking up of families because discontented wives have the financial capability to live apart from their husbands.

Less stable families produce more delinquents for one of two reasons, Toby said. Either a youngster's damaged personality leaves him prone to violent reactions to trivial provocation, or else parental neglect leads young persons to weak unwholesome companionship outside the family.

If the first is true, then there is little that can be done about some forms of delinquency, said Toby, because "it is unlikely that most family catastrophes can be prevented," and therefore "delinquency may be part of the price of living in a rich society."

There is more hope if the cause is the result of family breakups that drive youths to seek out their delinquent peers, Toby said, because "more effective programs of delinquency control can be designed" to cope with that problem.

Toby added to his list of causes the fact that "affluent societies are also secular societies. The distribution of goods and services here and now is a more important preoccupation than concern with eternal salvation."

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

The two men who hold the world's fate in their hands put on a silly spectacle this week as they played a cat-and-mouse game of diplomacy to decide whether they should meet for talks.

On the surface it appeared a simple matter that since Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin was in the U.S. to attend the United Nations General Assembly debate on the Middle East he should get together with President Johnson.

Unfortunately, the ways of big power politics and diplomacy are not that straightforward.

First it was reported that Kosygin wanted Johnson to come to New York, but LBJ said no, the meeting should be in Washington. For a time it appeared they were locked in this position and no meeting would take place.

As the pressures mounted for the summit session one report suggested if the two men did not get together the cold war would be on again and the world headed for disaster, which seemed to place a bit too much importance on the talks.

In any case the two leaders finally came up with the obvious solution—they would meet halfway between New York and Washington in the little New Jersey town of Glassboro.

There they met over lunch, and for several hours after, discussing the Middle East, Vietnam, and other matters of mutual concern. Rather than making hard decisions, however, the two men were probably more interested in sizing each other up. They will meet again Sunday.

●

The little summit drama was played against a backdrop of the UN debate where rival resolutions by the U.S. and the Soviet Union formed the basis of discussion.

After denouncing Israel's "aggressive actions," and harshly condemning U.S. and British policy in the Mideast, Kosygin called on the Assembly to demand the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Egypt, Syria and Jordan. His resolution also asked that Israel pay restitution for damages to the Arabs.

The U.S. resolution was presented the next day by Ambassador Arthur Goldberg, but was based on a policy speech made by Johnson outside the UN shortly before Kosygin spoke on Monday.

Johnson agreed that Israeli troops should be pulled back from conquered territory but stipulated that such a withdrawal would have to be accompanied by meaningful peace negotiations.

The U.S. resolution said a peace settlement must guarantee the territorial integrity of all Middle East countries and assure freedom of passage through international waterways, specifically the Gulf of Aqaba.

●

Johnson also called for a limitation on shipment of weapons to the Mideast, but there was mounting evidence during the week that the arms race is on again.

Reports from Moscow indicated the Soviet Union has agreed to rebuild the Egyptian armed forces to their strength before the war and has already begun delivery of MiG jets and tanks.

France has lifted its embargo on arms shipments and resumed supplying Israel with weapons and parts. Israel urged the U.S. and Britain to end their embargo too, since Russia was once again aiding the Arabs.

●

Meanwhile at the UN some of the smaller non-aligned nations were working on a resolution that might break the impasse created by the big powers.

There was also a growing criticism of the Israeli position:

British Foreign Minister George Brown urged Israel in the strongest terms not to annex the Old City of Jerusalem;

India demanded that Israel troops withdraw before peace negotiations;

And President de Gaulle publicly condemned "the opening of hostilities by Israel."

●

Elsewhere:

Arab soldiers mutinied against British rule in Aden and 17 U.K. soldiers were killed in savage fighting . . .

The U.S. admitted it had strafed a Russian freighter in a North Vietnam port earlier this month and issued a formal apology . . .

Heavyweight boxing champion Cassius Clay was sentenced to five years in prison and fined $10,000 for refusing induction into the U.S. armed forces. He was freed on bail pending an appeal . . .

An international television program designed to bring the world closer together by using Soviet and U.S. satellites became a victim of the current crisis when the Communist nations pulled out because they didn't like the way Western TV has been reporting the Mideast war.

Was Ferdinand the Bull World's First Hippie Hero?

By PHIL CASEY

WASHINGTON — One rainy Sunday afternoon in October, 1935, a man named Munro Leaf sat down and wrote a story about a bull named Ferdinand, and things were never the same again.

Ferdinand may have been the first hippie hero, a gentle, flower-smelling bull that just wanted to sit around and love.

Little did Leaf know what he had wrought that day, but he allows as how if he had it to do all over again, he certainly would. It was instant fame, and money, and nice.

One of the most interesting things about Leaf, besides Ferdinand the Bull and about 40 other children's books, is the fact that he hasn't worked for 28 years. Just wrote stories, is all. And had a happy marriage, and reared two sons, and played with two grandsons. And been no stranger to money.

Ferdinand the Bull, just in case there is someone who doesn't know, is the story of a gentle and unlikely bull that likes to sit around his cork tree and smell flowers and refuses to have anything to do with matadors and picadors.

It took off right away and has sold millions of copies across the world. It has been translated into every European language, most of the Eastern languages, and into Ewe, Ga, Twi, Fanti, and other African tongues. It is still a big seller in Japan. Its last printing in Poland was 90,000 copies. It has been published in Moscow, and Russian kids love it. It was a prize-winning Walt Disney movie.

"Ferdinand has been psychoanalyzed to death," Leaf said. "I've been called a leftist and a rightist, a pacifist. All I did was write a story about a bull that didn't want to fight in a bullring.

"I've though a lot about it. I think people like it because Ferdinand refuses to be shoved around, to be shoved into a situation he doesn't believe in. Nobody ever tried to take his cork tree away from him. I think probably Ferdinand would fight for that. It's a happy-ending story, about being yourself."

Leaf has always refused to write a sequel. "I don't want to do a bad imitation," he said. "I've always avoided making too much money. It can louse you up. I never wanted to do another Ferdinand. I'd rather just let him sit there."

Surprise visit to Europe by the Hon. John Gilbey

Entraining for an unannounced visit to Europe, the Hon. John Gilbey tells of his responsibilities as Gilbey's international Quality Controller.

"I am going to Europe to make sure that the European Gilbey's London Dry matches the original English standards. I expect to find the subtle flavour that people call ...the perfect balance for mixed drinks."

Since Gilbey's International Quality Controller doesn't want elaborate arrangements made for his European visit, he kept his plans to himself.

Next time you see Gilbey's famous frosty bottle, remember the Hon. John Gilbey and his job as Gilbey's International Quality Controller. When you see the gin with the perfect balance for mixed drinks, bear in mind his proud words: *"This is my gin. For no less than 110 years it has carried my family's name. 'Graveyard' Needs More Than a Brush

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Times staff reporter Humphry Davy spent three days in the area around the West Coast village of Bamfield. In this, the second of two articles, he tells of the efforts to preserve the quaintness of the wilderness domain.

BAMFIELD—Relics of old shipwrecks can still be seen at low tides at scattered points along lower Vancouver Island's west coast, better known in the days of sail as the graveyard of the Pacific.

Recently we visited the scenes of some of these wrecks, and to inspect the condition of the 60-mile-long scenic west coast trail which skirts the bluffs and beaches from Bamfield to Port Renfrew.

Wedged between rocks the huge boiler of the steamer Michigan was found. Its brass propeller and shaft lay nearby, partly imbedded in the sand.

The ship was wrecked in 1893, about four miles south of Pachena Lighthouse.

Ships' plates, broken spars, cable and rusted winches were found on other beaches.

Twelve miles south of Pachena Lighthouse was the scene of the wreck of the steamer Valencia of San Francisco. She sank on Jan. 23, 1906, with a loss of 117 lives.

Two years ago a diver made several thousands of dollars from brass recovered from the submerged wreck.

Brass brings in 20 cents a pound or more, depending on the quality. A bronze propeller made before the First World War, and weighing three tons, will fetch several thousands of dollars.

There is still money to be made from salvage operations if the location of the hulks of the old wrecks along the coast can be pinpointed.

But this is sometimes difficult because records often don't tell the exact position where the ships went down.

The main purpose of visiting the west coast was to inspect the condition of the trail—the longest natural sea coast trail in North America.

Many hikers and groups, including members of the Washington Mountaineering Club with a membership of 5,000, will be using the trail this summer.

Venturer Island Scouts also plan to improve and brush out the trail to make walking easier.

But it soon became evident after a quick inspection, the trail will need more than a brushing if it is to be kept open next year.

Two small bridges about 10 miles south of Pachena lighthouse need repairs. It is doubtful if they will last another winter.

If these two bridges collapse a large part of the trail between Pachena Bay, near Bamfield, and the Walbran, five miles north of Renfrew, will be closed.

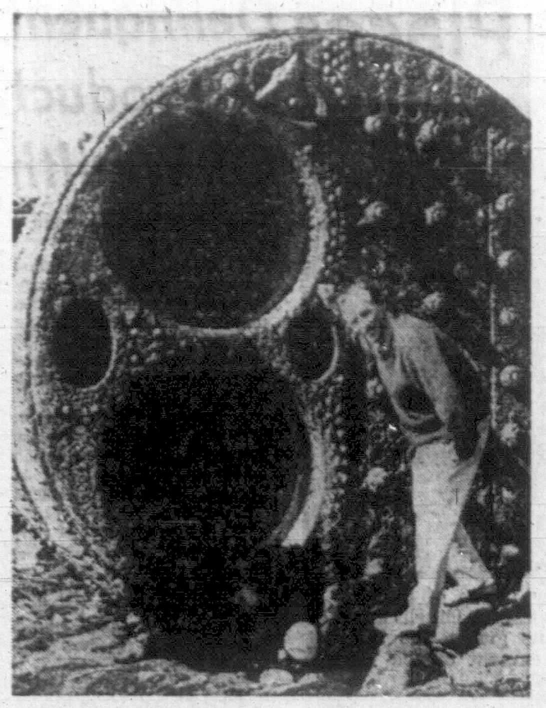
Government assistance will be necessary because the task requires the help of trained woodsmen.

The use of overhead cables to cross some of the larger rivers are no longer considered safe and wading is advised.

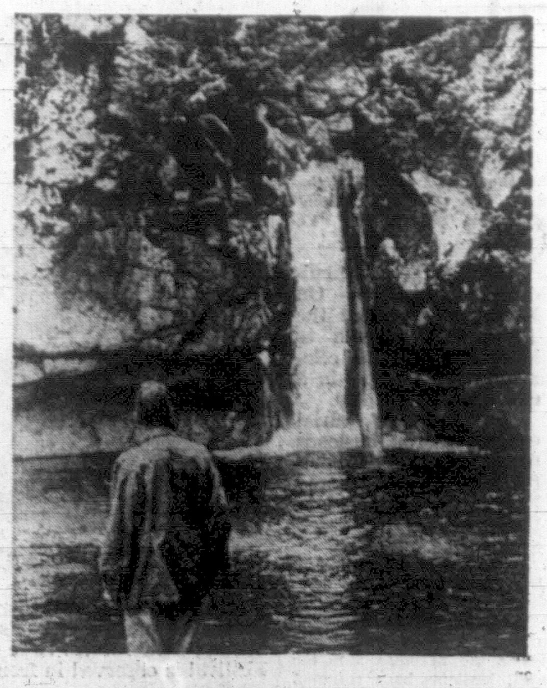
For those interested in camping or hiking along the trail, it would be advisable to start from Pachena Bay. An alternate route is to join the trail at the mouth of the Nitinat Inlet and to hike either north or south.

From a scenic standpoint there are few footpaths to compare with the coast trail. It abounds in small waterfalls which pour over cliffs into the sea, sandy beaches, coves and caves.

But it would lose much of its attractiveness if it lost its natural state.



RELICS of ill-fated ships are numerous along the Island's west coast. Times news wire editor Peter Murray inspects the boiler of the Michigan, wrecked in 1893 near Pachena lighthouse. She was considered a fine steam coaster, but was unlucky from the moment she arrived on the west coast in 1888. She caught fire once. Shortly afterwards, she was seized for smuggling.



WATERFALLS in lagoon like settings are familiar sights along the scenic west coast trail. The trail skirts bluffs and numerous sandy beaches. Boy Scouts will brush out and improve the trail this summer.

One of the bank's main jobs, he said, would be to offset the preponderance of financing from the east.

"This is a chance to buy Canada back," he said.

Dark Hour Of War

John Swetenham, ALLIED INTERVENTION IN RUSSIA, 1918-1919 and the Part Played by Canada. Ryerson Press. 315 pp. Index. Photographs. Maps. $9.00.

Reviewed by R. H. Roy

Fifty years ago the Allies were facing some of the darkest moments of the Great War.

In November, 1917, the Russian Revolution broke out and six months later the Treaty of Brest-Litousk was signed. Russia withdrew from the war, and great areas of her western lands fell into the hands of the Central Powers. For the Allies it was a catastrophe.

It was for this reason that the Allies decided to intervene.

If the Eastern Front could be re-established the flow of German divisions to the Western Front could be stopped.

•

Moreover, Germany must be denied the Russian wheat, oil, coal and other economic benefits which would reinforce her strength, and the hundreds of thousands of Austrian and German prisoners of war must not be allowed to rejoin the armies of the German Kaiser and Austrian Emperor.

Once the decision was made, intervention began from the south, the north and the east, and during the next two years the new Bolshevik government was beset on all sides.

Internally conditions were chaotic. Red and White Russians were locked in civil war, and the breakdown in Russia's communications, administration and production resulted in unemployment and famine.

By 1918 and especially early in 1919, it would have taken very little effort to have defeated the Communists, but the disunity and lack of coordination among the Allied forces gave the Reds enough time to strengthen their forces and eventually impose their power over most of Russia.

It is a very complicated military and diplomatic story of intrigue, frustration, national cross-purposes, blunders and jealousies.

Nevertheless, Swettenham threads his way with skill through the jungle of campaigns and diplomatic manoeuvring, sometimes leaving the reader bewildered by the complexities of fast moving events, but ultimately emerging with a vivid and colorful summary of the area and period covered.

•

Perhaps one of the most interesting aspects of this volume is the author's description of the singular circumstances which led to the Czechoslovakian Corps' domination of a huge area in Siberia for months on end. Equally interesting is the fate of the Allies' intervention in Siberia itself, and especially the disunity between the forces whose mutual suspicion and rivalry led to months of the decision to withdraw.

In this volume he upholds his reputation. Within the space of 300 pages he has condensed into readable form the tremendous complexities which surrounded Allied intervention, and brings to the reader a well-balanced and lucid account of the birth of the Soviet Union from the point of view of a military historian.

IN MEMORIAM—John Masefield, O.M. Poet Laureate and Grand Old Man of English Letters. (See story below.)

LOOKING AT BOOKS

Children Will Remember That 'Sea Fever' Writer

By JOAN COLDWELL

Have you ever heard of poets Laurence Eusden, H. J. Pye or Alfred Austin?

COLDWELL

Few people have, I imagine, and yet these, like Wordsworth, Tennyson and Robert Bridges, once held the exalted position of Poet Laureate of Great Britain.

The title was first officially conferred by letters patent in 1670, when John Dryden undertook to produce formal verses on state occasions in return for three hundred pounds and a butt of Canary wine.

Most of Dryden's successors have been considerably less accomplished as poets; with the exception of four or five, each deserves the comment Pope made on Laurence Eusden, "He sleeps among the dull of ancient days."

John Masefield, who died last month, was the 15th Poet Laureate.

He, too, produced some embarrassingly poor verses on state occasions but his work in general ranks him among the few real poets to have held the title.

Often after a writer's death there is an upsurge of interest in his work. I hope this happens in Masefield's case if only so that more children may be introduced to his poems and stories.

Much of Masefield's poetry is unsophisticated, with vigorous rhythms and straightforward themes, just right for children to read aloud. "Sea-Fever," his best-known poem, is a good example, its long rolling lines and suggestive sounds capturing the thrill of the sea.

My own favorite as a child was "Cargoes," sung at school to a complicated tune with some very high notes. This is an ideal poem for demonstrating the magic of sound patterns.

For years I thought that "Quinquireme of Nineveh" was a sort of sweet-smelling ointment; this played havoc with the meaning but I loved its sound. I still have difficulty in remembering that it actually refers to a boat with five sets of oarsmen.

•

The appeal to the ear is very obvious in the short ballads and chanties.

Here too is the magic of distant places and the excitement of the sea-faring life.

Masefield's skill as a storyteller is best seen in the longer poems, such as "Reynard the Fox." This gripping story of an English fox-hunt is excellent for reading aloud; Masefield himself made a recording of it in 1960. There are two other records available, from which one can hear the strength and versatility of Masefield's voice, even in his old age.

Masefield devoted much study to the art of verse-speaking, organizing recitations at Oxford University and amateur readings in his own home.

•

So convinced was he of the need for his verse to be spoken aloud that he first published his long poem "Ossian" not in print but on a gramophone record.

In his later life the Poet Laureate took an active interest in readings for children. It was, in fact, at the children's library in Toronto that the first John Masefield Story-Telling Festival took place in 1961.

Masefield's poems were not written specifically for children but many of his stories were. I've just been re-reading The Midnight Folk (issued as a Puffin paperback in 1963 but now apparently out of print). This book has the essential mark of a good story—it is gripping at any age.

The fantasy illustrates all aspects of Masefield's imagination: an exciting sea-story of smugglers and pirates, adventures in the English countryside, flashbacks into history, the trials of a small boy's daily life, comedy of characters with distinctive speech and manners and convincing magic with witches and talking animals.

And the writing is superb, ranging from accurately imitated conversation to pure poetry in the most dream-like passages.

•

I've emphasized the aspects of Masefield's work that appeal to children, but there's exciting reading for adults in the poems and novels. Masefield was a prolific writer; there are historical novels, poems of spiritual crisis, essays on Shakespeare and Chaucer, plays and autobiography.

It is strange to think that this man who has just died was a close friend of John Millington Synge and a frequenter of the literary evenings held in London by the young W. B. Yeats.

Stranger still to remember that it was Masefield who, in the early years of this century, succeeded in finding a publisher for Synge's plays and who put commissions in Yeats's way.

Ireland's two great writers now seem to overshadow Masefield but perhaps the tide will turn and John Masefield will be recognized again as a worthy holder of the title, Poet Laureate.

EXPOSING REPORTER LIVES ON IN SEX TALE

THE HOLLOW SUNDAY, by Robert Harling; Clarke, Irwin and Company; $5.50.

Reviewed by R. C. Terry

Stories about newspapers used to be full of reporters with fags in their mouths and press cards in their hats, who lounged on their editors' desks.

They used to stumble on all kinds of rackets which they exposed singlehanded, and they usually won the boss's daughter and a fat raise in salary.

•

The tradition persists in Robert Harling's new novel, The Hollow Sunday, much modernized, and far more authentically done, since Mr. Harling is himself a Fleet Street editor and this is his fourth novel about journalism.

His hero, Paul Mortimer, is no Humphry Bogart reporter, yet he is still at heart the highly principled crusader of the old tradition. True, he doesn't have to punch his way out of a crisis; he is far too sophisticated for that — he sees justice done, though, by using his wits.

Sophistication is much apparent in Mortimer's way of life. Separated from his wife, yet occasionally sleeping in her bed when the mood takes them both, he enjoys other female company in the person of his daily help, a thoroughly improbable Cockney whose husband is a long-distance lorry driver.

The novel gets under way when Mortimer, a brilliant features writer, meets an old Oxford chum, Michael Spurway, who is to edit a new Sunday newspaper, aptly called "New Sunday." Spurway is one of today's modern idols — the TV personality, whose ambition is to become the most influential voice in Britain's communications industry — a super Dimbleby.

"New Sunday" is owned by another power-seeker, T. J. West, who lives to make money.

This fictional Lord Thomson of Fleet has set up "New Sunday" with complex web offset machines and the best staff money can buy.

•

The magic of the paper is that it is printed entirely in color. Everyone knows that color sells, and sure enough "The Observer" and "The Sunday Times" with their paltry color supplements begin to lose readers. But the paper is "hollow" because West really wants to sell it to the highest bidder once the color process has proved a success.

Swinging London, all white concrete and glass office blocks — Antonioni-style, is one sphere of action. The other is a nice, cosy Oxford, where Frensham Baker, a well-known sociologist, is Master of Mortimer's old college.

Mortimer stumbles on a sex scandal involving Baker, who is about to become Minister of Social Welfare, and the wife of a don. Back in London he is pressed by Spurway to destroy Baker in full color. But to do so will involve others in humiliation, and also rattle West's clients.

•

The complication of this plot and its unravelling give the novel as much tension as Mr. Harling's earlier The Endless Colonnade. Yet for all its modern elements — the take-over bid, the echoes of Profumo, the telly don and the tycoon, the novel is strangely old-fashioned. Not only because of the revamping of an old formula, but because of the over-bright tone and arch description. Something kept reminding me of the world of Wooster.

"She walked into the hotel like an eager Amazon, head high, black hair gleaming, splendidly sleek and serene. Only the shield and spear were missing."

The sort of entrance that would have made Bertie drop his monocle into his pink gin.

EX-UN CHIEF

Book Probes Dag's Faith

DAG HAMMARSKJOLD: The Statesman and His Faith, by Henry P. Van Dusen; Fitzhenry and Whiteside Ltd.; $5.70.

Reviewed by Anna Wootton.

When Dag Hammarskjold's Markings first appeared in 1964 it evoked astonishment and considerable hostility.

The hostile reviews came in the main from the European intellectuals of rationalist leanings who were outraged to find that the man they had known as a prodigiously able man of affairs and intellectual brilliance was also a "God-obsessed mystic."

Even those persons who feel sympathetic towards Markings and who sense that it speaks to their human condition have found it baffling.

•

Dr. Henry Van Dusen, the former president of Union Theological Seminary in New York, has set out in his book to provide illumination for the baffled by examining Markings within the context of the outward events of Hammarskjold's life and of his faith and by considering too what is revealed of the inner man by these writings which is not apparent from the outward life alone.

The author has gone to great pains to correlate the outward events and the inner meditations; at the back of the book there is even a chart of them to assist the reader.

This chart begins in 1953 because up until that date Hammarskjold had not specifically dated his Markings except as to year. (Unfortunately for those who own the Faber edition of Markings, the page numbers do not coincide with those given by the author, who is apparently using the Knopf edition.)

Dr. Van Dusen traces the dominant themes of Markings such as the "harrowing" loneliness which reaches its peak in the meditation on Hammarskjold's fifty-third birthday: "Didst thou give me this inescapable loneliness so that it would be easier for me to give thee all?" He discusses the paradoxical complexity of Hammarskjold, on the surface the best of friends but underneath the lonely, introverted person who hungered for "fellowship in righteousness" and not just for friendship on an intellectual basis.

He outlines what he sees as the main features of Hammarskjold's inner life.

There are the silences of the early years, the terrible anguish of the years 1950 to 1953 and the more affirmative mood thereafter ("For all that has been—Thanks! To all that shall be—Yes!") He notes the startling difference between Hammarskjold's great outward moments of triumph and the tone of rigorous self-examination in Markings at these moments.

In the Markings, there is always the stern reminder that any triumph is that of God's and that Hammarskjold is only the instrument.

The purely biographical part of this book is unrewarding because Van Dusen is content in the main to regurgitate other well-known biographical material on Hammarskjold, particularly Joseph Lash's book Dag Hammarskjold: Custodian of the Brush Fire Peace.

•

One cannot help wondering how legitimate is this wholesale borrowing of other people's material. However the biographical detail is merely to provide the reader with the necessary background for the discussion in depth of Markings and accordingly this defect is not so serious as it might otherwise be.

Perhaps the most interesting part of the book is the latter portion which specifically examines Hammarskjold's faith as revealed in Markings and in other statements made by him. Late in 1953, Hammarskjold appeared on a radio program arranged by Edward R. Morrow and gave there a statement of his belief which has become very well known.

In that statement he acknowledged his debt to the beliefs he inherited from his parents, the ethics of Albert Schweitzer, and the writings of the medieval mystics.

•

The latter taught him "how man should live a life of active social service in full harmony with himself as a member of the community of the spirit." Van Dusen traces all these influences in Markings and suggests that, if Hammarskjold had been making this statement at the end of his life, he would also have added the Bible, particularly the Psalms, and the philosophy of Martin Buber.

Van Dusen defines Hammarskjold's final faith as containing three principal elements: "The intimate presence of the living God, the example of Jesus, the imperative of duty." The book concludes with a consideration of the meaning of Hammarskjold's spiritual pilgrimage and its outcome for us today.

Markings is a significant book because, as W. H. Auden said in his Foreward, it is a unique endeavour "by a professional man of action to unite in one life the Via Activa and the Via Contemplativa."

•

In another sense too it speaks to our human condition because, as Van Dusen says in a perceptive paragraph, the loneliness and the hunger for fellowship which Hammarskjold experienced are known to some extent by most of us in the difficulty we find in attaining a true spiritual communion with our fellows.

There will probably always be argument as to whether the Hammarskjold revealed in Markings was a self-styled martyr or a truly God-inspired person. For those who wish to approach Markings in a sympathetic spirit, however, this book should provide considerable illumination and understanding.

A MOST PRIVATE INTRIGUE by Leo Rosten, McClelland and Stewart Ltd., 1967.

ONE OF US WORKS FOR THEM by Jack D. Hunter, Clark Irwin and Co., Ltd., 1967, $5.95.

Reviewed by Marjorie Menhenett

Both of the books reviewed this week may, for convenience, be referred to as spy novels, though Leo Rosten's tale really defies such easy categorization.

Rosten is a skilled and well-known author who, according to the book's jacket, occasionally "turns from writing about politics and painting, sociology and satire, to the "exhilaration of melodrama—which I write for my own pleasure."

•

A Most Private Intrigue is very engrossing "melodrama" indeed, full of sudden twists and turns which keep the reader guessing right up until the end.

The hero is Peter Galton whose past contains an unfinished and suspect episode; we empathize with him, but are never sure just what motivates his obsessive desire to retrieve his lost love from behind the Iron Curtain.

His manoeuvres take him from New York to Istanbul and into an alliance with a fat, sinister Turk who will do anything for money.

The characterization is, by and large, good, and the plotting excellent, and if one feels that the concluding revelation of villainy has not been sufficiently prepared for, one is almost ready to forgive the flaw in return for the real surprise. This is an imaginative story.

•

Jack Hunter's One of Us Works For Them likewise has no pretensions to being more than a good tale.

Concerned with the convolutions of espionage and counter-espionage of German-based agents, it is almost less occupied with the outwitting of the Communist enemy than with the unsnarling of the knot manufactured by the secret activities of representatives of the various agencies of a single country.

The result is humor as well as intrigue. The central character is a harassed Captain Karl Kraft, closely followed in importance by the very tough Wolfram Stark. In spite of the fact that they are nominally working together, the two are at sword's point until the last pages of the novel, where the knot is momentarily unravelled, and then tied up again.

Show Made a Change And It's a Big One

By TED GASKELL

Hardly a year goes by without some slight change in the Smile Show cast.

Usually a local person drops out and another steps in and until this year it's been a purely local show.

But this year sees the most impressive cast change with the addition of singer David Galbraith, a Canadian who made his mark in British television before returning to his native land to teach in Edmonton.

GALBRAITH
. . . big in Britain

This year he heard about the Smile Show and, anxious to bring his English wife and two children to the West Coast, auditioned by tape recording for the show. He was eagerly accepted.

Until now the show has "worked around" him, expecting that he would not be here until the Edmonton school term ended June 30.

This week he'd had enough of being away from wife Joan and his two children and got a leave of absence, relinquished close to $300 in salary to pay substitute teachers and headed west.

He got his start in television in England when he was a scene master at the Midlands ATV studios. He told no one there he had understudied Mario Lanza in Hollywood or had toured with Oklahoma. Then a producer heard him singing as he worked around the studio and gave him a spot in a variety show.

SETTLE DOWN

It was during his earlier search for work in England that he met his wife, Joan, who starred in an ice show. He approached the producer, who admitted he could sing. But this was an ice show. Could he skate? He couldn't but that didn't stop him from learning and he subsequently got a role in an ice show and got a wife too.

With a new son, David Junior, the Galbraiths settled down and David Senior left show business.

He got a job as a fireman but his heart was still in the theatre and when television wanted a scene master he applied and got it.

It wasn't long before he was a regular on the TV variety show Lunch Box and after that came touring jobs, variety shows, pantomimes and a recording session.

Four years ago while he was still at the top, he decided to return to Canada to see his father and the Galbraiths decided to stay.

They have another child, a daughter Joanne, and the four Galbraiths are settling in their new home in Oak Bay.

The next couple of weeks will be busy ones.

SORTING OUT

There's the sorting out of belongings that have arrived from the Prairies and the searching out of things that at present appear to have been lost en route.

There will be four or five Smile Show rehearsals a week until the show opens July 8, as the singer prepares for his part in the shows which includes appearances in sketches, and spots with Scottish songs, popular numbers and selections of songs made famous by Ivor Novello.

BRIDGE RESULTS

Winners of the Allmasters Duplicate Bridge Club's regular weekly games Thursday were:

They're An Unfunny Breed When Set Is Turned Off

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Comedians can be a most unfunny breed when the camera, microphone and audience are missing.

For them the work of provoking laughs can be terrifying.

Take the current crop of night club, movie and television comics, clowns, humorists:

Jackie Gleason—Off screen he is sombre and moody. He ruminates about serious movies he'd like to make, perking up when the subject turns to golf. Jokes? No.

Red Skelton—Depending on his mood the redhead can be by turns witty, philosophical and outright sad.

Jerry Lewis—A most serious, reflective man. A wide humanitarian streak runs through Jerry who has a strong sense of family and compassion for losers.

Bob Hope—An exception to most of his peers, Hope generally is in high spirits with a boundless supply of gags, quips and snappy one-liners. Humor is a way of life with him. He would rather laugh and make other persons laugh than any man in show business.

Milton Berle—Catch him when he's in a good mood and he'll clown for hours with old jokes, funny faces and ad lib yoks. But if he's blue Milton is as funny as a broken leg.

Jack Benny—Away from an audience he's as amusing as an undertaker. Rarely does he try to be funny. With him it's a profession. He's never "on" unless he's working.

LUCILLE
. . . when it counts

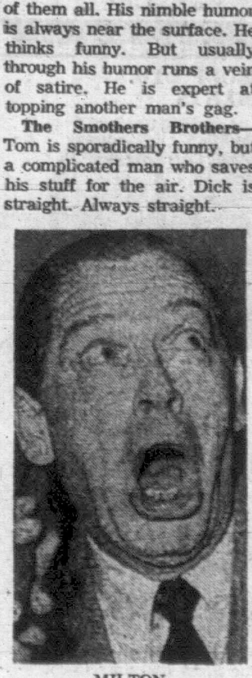
Lucille Ball—Makes no attempt to be funny unless the cameras are rolling. There is a quiet dignity about the lady who elicits laughs when they count. And only then.

Phyllis Diller—Quite the opposite from Lucy, Phyllis never harnesses her wit. She finds humor in everything and everyone around her. She is a female Bob Hope, always looking for a boffo reaction.

DEANO
. . . thinks funny

Dean Martin—Principally a singer-actor, Dino has one of the most original comic minds of them all. His nimble humor is always near the surface. He thinks funny. But usually through his humor runs a vein of satire. He is expert at topping another man's gag.

The Smothers Brothers—Tom is sporadically funny, but a complicated man who saves his stuff for the air. Dick is straight. Always straight.



MILTON
. . . long memory

He Suffered on That Long, Long Walk While Hiding Those Forbidden Books

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Have you ever wondered what happens to pink-cheeked clean-surpliced choirboys when they become too old to sing in a boys' choir?

A few of these "old" choirboys who live in Victoria, when questioned about that period in their lives, agreed that being in a boys' choir certainly did them no harm; some even went as far as to say it did them some good.

Hugh Curtis, a foremost citizen of Victoria, remembers singing in St. John's Anglican choir but he remembers the hikes they went on just as vivdly.

Proudly he recalls one hike that went from the church to Ten-Mile-Point and back. After a brief skirmish—private-school boys versus public-school boys, he still had enough energy to walk home.

An impression of gloom and drabness and alarming news-bulletins like that which announced the bombing of Pearl Harbor, is linked in his memory with the church in those war-clouded days of the 40s.

SINGING SOLDIERS

The senior choir, he says, felt the lack of the young men who were away in the forces, and greeted with joy any singing soldier who joined them while on leave. Hugh Curtis attributes much of his continued interest in choral music to his days as a chorister.

Another of Victoria's outstanding citizens, David Groos, also remembers his days as a choirboy both in Christ Church Cathedral and in St. Mary's, Oak Bay.

He remembers the five practices a week which kept them busy and the painful penitence of one misdemeanor. He and a friend, who was to sing a solo, wanted to read "Chums' Annuals" during the service. As these bulky books were forbidden fare in church, young Groos tucked both volumes up under his cassock.

Poor David Groos had forgotten that this was one of the occasions on which the choir walked in solemn procession up and down the aisles, in and out, in a huge figure-of-eight.

If you have ever tried to keep something from slipping when you could only use your elbows to keep it in place, you will appreciate the agonies he suffered on that long, long walk.

Brian Groos, like his father before him is now a soloist in the choir of Christ Church Cathedral; his daughters are talented and active students of music and in the Victoria Music Festival David Groos himself has been both commended and, on occasion, reprimanded for his contribution to the popular "Family Group".

Eddy Hulford, a contemporary of theirs, entered the church, became rector of St. James' Church in Vancouver and is now chaplain to Oakalla.

SERVE AS CANTOR

He still has such a beautiful voice that he is often invited by the Archbishop to serve as cantor at services of consecration.

While Bob Fleming grew up to be a golf champion, Desmond Higgs became a science teacher. He now teaches and experiments in the energy relationships of fishes at Esquimalt Junior Secondary School.

Flight-Lieutenant Bob Sherratt flies Voodoo jets at Comox while Ian Garnham works for the department of highways and Dave Slater is employed by the postal authorities. All of these men have kept close contact with the church and its music.

Art Smalley who was a boy chorister in England at the time when St. Paul's Church became Leicester Cathedral, has vivid memories of the boys' participation in civic ceremonies.

One of the wittiest scholars in town, Cyril Genge, poet-laureate to the Cathedral, insists that he is still a boy at heart though he sings tenor at Christ Church Cathedral.

Boys have not changed much, he feels, for when he was a treble at Upton-St. Leonard's he became announced at the length of the dull sermons. To rectify this he set the raucous vestry clock to sound an alarm after 10 minutes of the sermon. It did, with startling effect upon the congregation, but the rector went on droning, apparently unabashed by the sound.

From that time on, however, it was noticed that his sermons tended to draw to a hesitant and anxious halt after 10 minutes.

After serving as a choral exhibitioner at Peterhouse, Genge went on to sing at St. Michael's, Tenbury. Perhaps memories of these institutions influenced him in the naming of his two sons. Peter who was a choirboy at Christ Church is now a server while Michael is one of the senior trebles in the boys' choir.

LEADING COMPOSER

John Beckwith who ranks as one of Canada's leading composers; who teaches at the Conservatory of Music and the University in Toronto was once a choirboy here. He has passed on his music to his four children who all play several instruments and enjoy music very much.

Dick Eaton, too, who often mentions his chorister days in Victoria is now Professor of Music at Edmonton University.

R. P. MacMillan, whose son is also following in his choral footsteps remembers, among other things, the services welcoming Archbishop Harold Sexton to Victoria.

He also attributes to his reading of Tom Swift and other educational books, during the service, to the forming of his literary tastes.

He it was who regrets that never, since he was 12 years old, and a choirboy, has any lady, young or old, said to him, "You look just like a little angel."

Month-Long Feast Of Art, Dance, Music

From June 30 to July 30 the Tenth Vancouver Festival will present a packed schedule of plays, films, operas, musicals, ballets and organ and harpsichord recitals.

Highlights will include two unique productions, a miniature opera, "Master Peter's Puppet Show" featuring four-and-a-half-foot high puppets and the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra; and, coupled with this, an unusual symphonic ballet "The Seven Deadly Sins."

Outstanding among the visiting artists are Sir Arthur Bliss, Master of the Queen's Musick. Van Cliburn, world-famous pianist, the renowned harpsichordist George Malcolm, the eminent Swiss organist Emil Bachtold and the gifted musician Gunther Schuller.

The Festival for Centennial year promises a month-long feast of music, theatre, dance and art designed with an appeal for everyone.

QE Theatre Gets Liquor

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mayor Tom Campbell said Friday the Queen Elizabeth Theatre plans to serve liquor to patrons for the first time on July 1.

He said in an interview the liquor control board granted the theatre a banquet permit to operate a bar starting with the Vancouver Festival, which opens June 30.

The mayor said an ounce of liquor plus mix will sell for 85 cents or three for $2.50.

'City's Thin Disguise'

Victoria is seen as a movie-set town thinly disguised as a bit of Olde England in a new humorous map of Canada titled irreverently The Indefensible Border. Devised by four well-known Canadians, Pierre Berton, Ken Lefolii, Jack McClelland and artist John Richmond, the four-color fold-out map shows 4,000 miles of border complete with wry centennial comments and cartoons. It goes on sale this week with a first printing of 50,000.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Scurry Spree In Spotlight

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prospects of a major mineral find ignited such a hectic buying spree in Scurry-Rainbow this week that trading in the stock was suspended.

Trading in Scurry halted early in Thursday's session on orders from the Toronto Stock Exchange. It is not to resume until a technical report is made public on the company's announced nickel, copper and cobalt find in northeastern Saskatchewan.

Elsewhere on Canada's major stock exchanges trading was dull and indecisive with only a handful of issues scoring solid gains.

At Toronto the industrial index, which measures the price movements of key stocks, edged up .11 to 166.38. At Montreal, it advanced .25 to 165.79.

Scurry-Rainbow jumped 11⅝ to 42⅞ on 282,000 shares from Tuesday's opening to the time it was suspended. It could have been bought at 21½ a month ago.

Trading in the stock was delayed last Friday at the request of the company intil information of the find could be provided.

Details were announced late in Monday's session, but the exchange withheld trading until Tuesday to give the financial community time to digest the news.

REACHES HIGH

Because Scurry is a Calgary-based oil producer, it helped push the western oil index to a yearly high. The index climbed 11.36 to 183.54 after touching a high of 183.91.

At Toronto, other western oil stocks continued to strengthen on speculation that Canada will be able to increase its exports of oil to the U.S. as a result of the Middle East crisis.

However analysts say this is a long-term outlook as the industry must first meet the needs of Quebec and the Maritimes, especially if Middle East supplies are cut off from these areas for more than a few weeks.

Hudson's Bay rose 4¼ to 39, Canadian Superior 3⅜ to 44⅜ and Great Plains 2 to 14.

Trans - Canada Pipe Lines, which touched a high of 33½ earlier in the week, closed with a gain of ½ to 31⅛. The company asked Parliament to allow it to more than double its capitalization of common shares and increase its preferred shares by five times.

The stock rose sharply Tuesday after the U.S. Federal Power Commission approved its $212,000,000 project to build a pipeline south of the Great Lakes. The line will go from Emerson, Man., through Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan to Sarnia, Ont.

The approval means Trans-Canada can go ahead with plans to pipe more badly-needed natural as from fields in western Canada to the East.

MOVES UP

Home Oil, which owns about 17 per cent of Trans-Canada's shares, moved up. The A stock gained ¾ to 20⅜ and the B stock 1⅛ to 22¾.

Contributing to the market's indecisiveness was a weak New York market. There was also a prediction by the Canadian Construction Association that 1967 may show the first year-to-year decrease in value of construction since 1960.

Alcan dropped 1⅝ to 29⅜, Magna Electronics 1¼ to 19, Massey-Ferguson 1⅛ to 21, CPR ¾ to 71 and Bell Telephone ⅝ to 48⅞.

Ford of Canada moved up 16 to 162⅝ although company officials could give no reason for the jump. International Minerals gained 3¾ to 37¼, Versatile 2⅞ to 40½ and Moore Corp. 2¼ to 32½.

On index, golds were up .97 to 173.70 while base metals eased .03 to 102.72. Volume was 13,569,000 shares compared with 15,222,000 last week.

At Montreal, utilities advanced .45 to 148.95, banks .30 to 124.72 and papers .38 to 112.15. Volume was 3,907,000 shares compared with 4,402,000 last week.

NEW PRESIDENT of Institute of Chartered Accountants of B.C. is Donald McL. Anderson of Vancouver. He was elected at the recent annual meeting at Prince George. Member of the council is Ronald G. Campion of Victoria.

Bethlehem Chief Raps Tax Report

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bethlehem Copper Corp. is a perfect example of a mining company that should never have come into production according to the Carter Tax Commission's reasoning, says company president Patrick M. Reynolds.

He said the commission has "arrogantly brushed aside all representations made on behalf of the industry" in eliminating the three-year tax exemption period for new mines.

"Under this recommended tax system, Bethlehem would never have come into being," he told shareholders at the company's annual meeting Thursday.

Mr. Reynolds said the commission stated there is no evidence that concessions to the mining industry have had a "beneficial effect on the over-all economic well-being of Canadians."

"Without tax incentives we could not have obtained financing," Mr. Reynolds said. "Even with the tax incentives we were refused financing by all whom we approached in North America.

"Imagine our position today if the Carter recommendations had been in effect in 1960 and 1961."

He listed 12 benefits to the economy which have come with opening of its mine in the Highland Valley area of B.C.

These included payment of the original $5,000,000 debt, providing employment for 250 people, spending of $17,000,000 on construction equipment, payment of annual local taxes amounting to $100,000 and other federal and provincial taxes and revitalizing of Ashcroft, a dying community, through building of homes, a hospital and recreational facilities.

"This is the company Mr. Carter suggests may not have had a beneficial effect on the over-all economic well-being of Canadians," Mr. Reynolds said.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Upturn Seen by Majority

NEW YORK (AP)—The attention of many businessmen, economists and government officials centred this week on the economic outlook for the second half of 1967.

Opinion was divided, but the majority seemed to feel there will be an upturn in the next six months.

Many factors were involved in the various projections: Inventory adjustment, capital investment, consumer spending, taxes, government spending, Vietnam and the Middle East.

Among the sources making forecasts were Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York and Standard and Poor's Corp., an investment advisory firm.

Morgan Guaranty said:

"The customary business indicators continue to show that high-level sluggishness remains the dominant characteristic of the evolving business situation. But performance is nevertheless consistent with the widely-held view that conditions favorable to business acceleration in the second half are developing."

Standard and Poor's commented:

"A modified version of the late 1965 experience—a rapidly rising economy, a fast increase in profits, an expanding money supply and rising interest rates—may well be in the making for late 1967."

Indications were that the downward adjustment of heavy unventories was continuing. Some said it had been completed.

HOPE OF INCREASE

Restoration of the seven-per-cent U.S. business investment tax credit gave hopes of increased spending for new plant and equipment. Railways placed orders for new cars.

Consumers were expected to step up their spending to parallel the sustained rise in disposable income. Among the beneficiaries would be producers of consumer durable goods, particularly automobiles.

Whether the rate of government spending increases will continue depends mainly on whether the Vietnam war will escalate and on what transpires in the Middle East.

Automobile production this week was estimated at 177,000 passenger cars, up 3.6 per cent from 170,849 the previous week but down 5.6 per cent from 187,000 a year ago.

Steel output last week slipped to the lowest level of the year. Mills turned out 2,210,000 tons of steel, down 3.1 per cent from 2,281,000 tons the previous week.

Sharp Increase In House Starts During May

OTTAWA (CP) — Construction started during May on 16,096 houses and apartments, 57.4 per cent more than in May last year, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. has reported.

The housing starts in May were at an annual rate of 171,400, compared with 134,700 in April.

The Crown-owned agency said that construction activity in March, April and May offset the housing slump in January and February. Starts in the first five months of they ear were 6.2 per cent higher than in the same period last year.

May housing starts showed a 53.9-per-cent increase in single detached houses and a 60.4-per-cent increase in apartment units over a year earlier.

GIANT SHIPLOADER designed for Wesfrob by Stephens - Adamson Manufacturing Co. Ltd. and the unusual dock on which it travels, from Wright Engineers Ltd., is symbolic of the inventiveness and vast sums of money stimulated by Japanese interest in B.C. mining. The Wesfrob operation at Tasu is the latest in an important series of new mining ventures to come to B.C. and depends entirely on the Japanese market. The loader will travel 450 feet to put iron and copper concentrates into vessels of up to 55,000 tons deadweight, at a rate of 2,500 metric tons per hour.

BUSINESS VIEWS

Japan Playing Major Role In B.C. Mining Industry

By AB KENT
Business Editor

Recent record shipments of mineral concentrates to Japan bring home with great force the role played by the B.C. mining industry in the Pacific rim market.

They also underline the great value of Japanese buyers—especially those with long-term contracts — to the provincial mining industry, which is now second only to the forest industry as a revenue earner.

Kent

Close estimates of total 1966 mineral sales to Japan by B.C. producers show the dollar value equalled 25 per cent of the gross $331.7 million.

In other words, $82.8 million worth of mining production was purchased by Japanese interests for processing and manufacturing in Japan.

To the Canada-Japan trade picture, B.C. mining was worth 20 per cent of the estimated $400 million total Canadian sales to Japan in 1966.

Such a solid market has a substantial and much appreciated bearing on development of the mining industry, which needs the incentive of strong markets as well as tax relief in order to install expensive production machinery and techniques.

Iron and copper concentrates are responsible for the greater part of the revenue from Japan, the iron market going back more than 15 years and now worth $18-$20 million a year.

Tide Turned

But it was not until B.C. centennial year in 1958 that the mining tide really turned toward Japan, the year in which copper concentrates accounted for $1.3 million in revenue.

Last year the Japanese bought 101,600,000 pounds of copper concentrates worth $54.6 million.

It was in 1958 that Japan began buying B.C. gold, a market that has grown steadily from the first year's $53,000 to last year's $1.4 million.

And in the same year Japan began taking B.C. silver, although this is not a large market, worth just over a half-million dollars in 1966.

But within the next two years coal and nickel were added to the metal ores and concentrates bought here by Japan.

Big Winner

Coal promises to be a much bigger winner than the $2.1 million valuation put on B.C. sales to Japan last year; like copper, iron, zinc and molybdenum, there are vast coalfields yet undeveloped both in northern and southern B.C. Long-term contracts are sought by Crows Nest Industries Ltd. and newer, smaller companies.

Metal ores and concentrates sent to Japan also include lead, worth more than $2.2 million last year, as well as scrap lead, copper, aluminum, brass, bronze, zinc and silver.

(Not all the scrap shipped originated in B.C., so no accurate value is available.)

Asbestos worth in excess of $768,000, originating chiefly in B.C., was shipped last year, and sulphur accounted for about $325,000, but most came from outside B.C.

Petroleum and natural gas is assumed to be worth several million, although the gross $11.4 million checked through B.C. customs ports for Japan last year also includes coal and petroleum originating elsewhere.

Some mines, such as Bethlehem Copper Corp. operation in the Highland Valley, and Wesfrob's Tasu mine, commit all or nearly all their output to Japan.

Bethlehem will send all its copper concentrates to Sumitomo Metal Mining Co. until the end of February, 1973. It has a copper-molybdenum mill capacity of 5,500 tons per day.

Long Contract

Wesfrob has a 10-year contract with Mitsubishi International Corp. to sell all of its iron and copper output, worth at least $110,000,000.

Zeballos Iron Mines sends concentrate to Japan; Giant Mascot Mines Ltd. three months ago sent its 66th nickel-copper concentrate shipment to Japan, bringing its total in seven years of shipping to 148,734 tons worth $17.1 million in U.S. funds.

The super ore carrier Texada—the largest commercial vessel to dock in B.C. waters—last fall commenced record shipments of up to 68,500 long tons for Texada Iron Mines Ltd. at Texada Island.

The most valuable cargo ever taken from Vancouver by a single ship was 15,680 tons of copper concentrate from Craigmont's operation at Merritt during March.

The Samaharu Maru took the $3.5 million (U.S.) shipment for Nippon Mining Co. via Mitsui and Co.

Big Financer

Japan is also important as a financer of likely properties.

More than half the development capital for New Imperial Mines Ltd. copper-iron-gold-silver property in the Yukon is provided by Japanese interests, and a four-party Japanese involvement is arranged to help bring Granisle Copper Ltd.'s $12.8 million operation at Babine Lake to production.

It has been estimated that Japanese investment in Canadian industry amounts to "at least $50 million," a figure quoted by R. L. Houston, executive director of the Canada-Japan Trade Councl.

A good deal of it is concentrated in the mining industry for metal-hungry Japanese manufacturing. (B.C. and Yukon Chamber of Mines manager Thomas Elliott estimates $25 million in Japanese exploration and development backing in this area.)

As ties with Japan continue to develop in other areas, firm financial bonds for the mining industry continue to be secured, to the mutual interest of both countries.

If nothing else, as Mines Minister Donald Brothers remarked earlier this week, the industry "is making Vancouver one of the greatest mining capitals of the world."

"TAKE SECOND LOOK" TAX CRITICS ADVISED

CALGARY (CP)—Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp Friday told critics of the Carter royal commission on taxation—many of whom represent the oil industry here—that they might benefit from a closer reading of the commission's report.

Mr. Sharp in a luncheon speech to the Calgary Chamber of Commerce and a subsequent interview, noted that the oil and agriculture industries in particular appear unenthusiastic about Carter commission recommendations.

"Many of those who are displeased with the report," he said, "haven't read it."

FINANCE MINISTER:

'Demand Forces Strong as Ever'

CALGARY (CP) — Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp said Friday the under-lying forces of demand in the Canadian economy are as strong as ever and there should be a high rate of economic expansion in the country by the end of the year.

Mr. Sharp said the greatest concern now is to avoid excessive increases in costs and prices in order to hold down inflation.

The minister was speaking to about 400 members and guests at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

He said a recession is not now in the cards in Canada.

Reiterating his budget speech exhortation to governments and private enterprise to take on responsibility for checking inflation, Mr. Sharp said spending in all fields must be carried out under a system of priorities.

In his wide-ranging address, the minister expressed confidence that discussions between American and Canadian authorities on increasing oil exports from Canada to the U.S. would result in an agreement favorable to Canada.

Mr. Sharp said the Middle East crisis should influence the Canadian - American oil discussions.

The minister said the tariff-cutting resulting from the Kennedy round negotiations in Geneva should be of particular benefit to the Western provinces.

At the same time, he said, tariff cuts will mean greater competition for domestic products, and this will make domestic cost and price control vitally important.

Mr. Sharp said Canadian officials at the recent joint U.S.-Canadian economic discussions had stated that the communications media in this country must stay in Canadian hands—a decision accepted by U.S. officials, who themselves waht to keep U.S. institutions in American hands.

Western Investors Plan To Buy Westbank Shares

TORONTO (CP)—York Lambton Corp., majority shareholder in the infant Bank of Western Canada, will sell its stock to investors in Western Canada, R. M. Thomas, York Lambton president, said Friday.

In a statement, he said the stock would be sold at the subscription price of $15 a share. Total value of York Lambton's holdings in the bank is 50.4 per cent worth about $6,500,000.

Mr. Thomas said York Lambton is attempting to carry out a distribution of holdings through the western provinces to "people of stature who will give the greatest possible benefit of future success to the bank."

The sale, he said, will carry out the original objective of establishing a bank to serve the needs of Western Canada.

Mr. Thomas said he had had help from the bank's western directors and from B. F. Tanner, a partner in the Toronto investment firm of Wisener, Mackellar and Co., in organizing investor groups in each of the four western provinces to negotiate the sale.

There was no immdeiate comment from the president of British International Finance Canada Ltd., Marc Bienvenu of Montreal.

Mr. Bienvenu bought control of BIF and its subsidiaries, of which York Lambton is one, from Sinclair Stevens and a Toronto group, in March.

The bank shares were selling at $11.25 bid and $12 asked Friday.

The announcement appears to have breathed new life into the bank. Earlier this week there was speculation that Mr. Bienvenu, having failed to agree on operating methods with James Coyne, the bank's president, or to force Mr. Coyne's resignation, would begin winding up operations soon.

"We have driven a Rover 2000 TC for nearly 3000 Miles, on all kinds of roads and in every kind of weather and we believe that it is absolutely the best sedan that has ever been presented in the pages of this magazine."

POLE RECORD ALSO TOPPLES

Ryun Felt He Lagged Before Searing Track

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP)—Amazing Jim Ryun, without collaborators, wrote another lustrous chapter in his continuing series of world mile records with a 3:51.1 in the National AAU track and field championships.

Ruyn had to set his own pace Friday night but it was the 20-year-old running star's blistering 53.5 on the final lap that enabled him to break the 3:51.3 he ran last July in Berkeley, Calif.

Pole vaulter Paul Wilson climaxed the two-day competition at Memorial Stadium with another world record—17 feet, 8 inches. The Southern California sophomore wiped out the mark of 17-7 established by teammate Bob Seagren just two weeks ago.

But the modest, smiling Ryun captured the sentiments of the 11,600 fans who thrilled to his solo virtuosity.

SETS PACE

"I wanted the pack to go a little faster in the first lap," said Ryun. "When it lagged a little, I decided to go out on the pace by myself. I knew it would be harder, but it was the only way.

"When I heard the timers say 1:59 at the first half, I didn't think I would get the record," Ryun added, but he turned in a 58.6 third quarter, then sprinted away from the field, bringing the screaming crowd to its feet with his classic finish.

Ryun's quarter - mile splits were 59.2, 59.8, 58.6 and 53.5, compared with 57.7, 57.7, 59.6 and 56.3 in his 3:51.3 last year.

Incredibly, the next six finishers also broke the once-formidable 4-minute mark.

Jim Grelle of the Multnomah Track Club was second in 3:56.1; Dave Wilborn of Oregon, 3:56.2; Tom Von Ruden of Long Beach, Calif., 49ers track club, 3:56.9; Roscoe Divine of Oregon, 3:57.2; Sam Bair of Kent State, 3:58.7, and high school sensation Martin Liquori of Essex, N.J., 3:59.8.

Wha' Happen To 22 Million, Ali, Old Boy?

(Times News Services)

Neither Muhammad Ali nor Cassius Clay is burdening congressional mailmen with letters of reaction of his decision to risk jail rather than military service, if a random sampling is indicative.

It may come as a shock to Ali to learn that his bid for exemption as a Black Muslim minister has not assumed the proportion of a "gut issue," as they say on The Hill in Washington.

Before he formally refused induction by failing to take the customary step forward at a ceremony in Houston in April, Ali said, "they cannot take my heavyweight title away outside the ring; 22 million of my people would not let them."

The wisdom of their judgments aside, the World Boxing Association and the New York State Athletic Commission did strip Ali of his championship.

His presumption that every Negro is bestirred by everything that happens to him was hardly reflected Thursday at the office of Rep. John Conyers Jr. (D—Mich.), who is emerging as the leading Negro voice in Congress with Adam Clayton Powell unseated.

A spokesman for Conyers said that not one letter has been received since Ali was convicted.

The office of Rep. William O. Cowger (R—Ky.), former mayor of Louisville, said the last letter received about Ali came in "February or March," and said "We finally got rid of him; he is gone to Houston."

Sorry about that, Muhammad!

Hole-in-One Helps Title-Hunting Golfer

SHAWNEE ON DELAWARE, Pa. (AP)—Hal Irwin, charging around Shawnee golf course like an amateur Arnold Palmer, fired a spectacular seven-under-par 65 Friday to take the lead in the 70th annual NCAA golf championship with a 54-hole total of 207.

The 22-year-old from the University of Colorado collected nine birdies and lofted a five-iron shot off the 220-yard 14th tee that took two bounces and rolled into the cup for his first hole-in-one in competitive golf.

Irwin overtook the leader of the first two rounds, Florida's husky Steve Melnyk, and opened up a five-stroke lead.

Melnyk, who started the third round over the 7,025-yard par-72 course with 140 after rounds of 69 and 71, slipped to a par 72 and second place with a 54-hole total of 212.

Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver, a student at Arizona State, wound up with a 220 total following a 72 after rounds of 73 and 75 Wednesday and Thursday. He was tied with eight others.

Football Family Draws $250,000 For Settlement

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP)—The wife of Mike McKeever, former Southern California football star incapacitated by injuries suffered in a car accident in 1965, has received a $250,000 settlement.

Mrs. Judy McKeever accepted the compromise award on the eve of a scheduled $750,000 civil suit trial.

The defendents, Kenneth Brunette, 22, of Garden Grove, Calif., McPeek Plymouth Centre, also of Garden Grove, and Thomas Busal, a McPeek employee and Brunette's brother-in-law, agreed to the settlement.

McKeever is the twin brother of Marlin McKeever, now with Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League.

Police said McKeever's car was struck by a car driven by Brunette, Dec. 3, 1965.

STRAITS CLOSURE JULY 1

Sports Anglers Gaining Ground?

Commercial salmon fishing will be barred from an area off the southern tip of Vancouver Island, Fisheries Minister Robichaud announced in Ottawa Friday.

Closed to commercial fishermen after July 1 will be Area 19, which stretches from Race Rocks to the tip of Saanich Peninsula, and the part of Area 20 lying east of Sheringham Point in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Mr. Robichaud's statement said the decision was made "bearing in mind the needs of sports fishermen together with those of the important commercial fishing activities in the context of the most effective amnagement of the salmon resource."

'INTERIM' CLOSURE

The closure has been described as an "interim" one to be reviewed after completion of a special study now being carried on by the Federal Department of Fisheries to determine the movements of coho salmon and their availability.

Sports fishing interests had originally requested a two-mile net-free corridor along the southeastern and southwestern shore of Vancouver Island to the westerly entrance of Juan de Fuca Strait.

Mr. Robichaud said such a corridor would not solve the problem of the sportsmen, and in addition would have created serious difficulties for the salmon net fishermen.

California Side Tripped By Cowichan

Cowichan scored 73 for eight to defeat a touring University of California cricket team by two wickets Friday in an exhibition match at Shawnigan Lake.

Derek Hyde-Lay scored 18 runs for the winners, while Nick Evans collected 22 to push California's all out total to 72. Bowlers Dave Auld, Allister Murray and Jack Dickens captured three wickets each for Cowichan.

The Californians met a Victoria representative side today at Beacon Hill Park.

'Pressure Good' But Yates Rolls On

CLEVELAND (AP) — Armed with a new set of clubs and wielding a precision putter, modest Wayne Yates has a lot going for him.

The 25-year-old Georgian carried a two-stroke lead into today's third round of the $103,500 Cleveland Open golf tournament, with veterans Gardner Dickinson and Arnold Palmer in hot pursuit.

Yates, who admitted Friday after shooting his second straight 66 that "the pressure is pretty good," was likely to feel it a little more today.

He was to play in the same threesome with Palmer, the game's all-time leading money-winner.

TWO-STROKE LEAD

The rangy Yates had a 36-hole total of 132, two strokes better than Gardner Dickinson and three ahead of Palmer, who fired a 68 Friday.

Yates has earned only $3,781 in this, his second year on the tour.

Still in contention at 136 were Bob Charles, Allan Henning, Homero Blancas and Bert Weaver. Blancas and Steve Oppermann both fired 65s Friday to tie the course record.

Seventy - five pros survived the cut for the last two rounds, but a major casualty was R. H. Sikes, last year's winner.

Jack Nicklaus, the U.S. Open titlist, was nine back at 141 while Billy Casper stood at 142.

The leaders:

132—Wayne Yates.
134—Gardner Dickinson.
135—Arnold Palmer.
136—Allan Henning, Bob Charles, Homero Blancas and Bert Weaver.
137—Lionel Hebert.

PROFITABLE YEAR . . . . . . AT VICTORIA CLUB

Curlers Elect Moore

Gordie Moore has been elected president of the Victoria Curling Club at the club's annual general meeting. He succeeds Gar Taylor.

Dick Samson, is the new first vice-president, while Harvey Mossop steps into the second vice-president's position.

Former president Dick Pick, voted a lifetime membership at the meeting, was elected for a two-year term on the board of directors along with Jim Coffey, Norm Stewardson and Harry Vincent. Nancy Baker and J. R. "Scotty" Campbell were named for one-year terms.

The club showed a profit for the year's operations despite the fact it undertook several major projects.

The financial report showed a net operating profit of $13,314 and a final profit of $8,401.51 after deduction of bond interest, bank charges, depreciation charges and amortization.

Major accomplishments during the past year were the refinancing of club bonds, complete renovation and refurnishing of the club lounge and the hard-topping and lighting of the parking area. A number of other improvements were also made to the premises.

Vancouver Club Pulls Protest Of Overtime Loss

Victoria Shamrocks have officially won the much-talked - about protested overtime game played June 14 against Vancouver Carlings.

Shamrocks still share first place in the Inter-City Lacrosse League with the mainland club now that Carlings' president Bill Ellison has withdrawn his protest.

The protest was filed after Victoria won 9-8 by scoring into an open goal when Carlings failed to leave the dressing room to put in an overtime appearance at Memorial Arena.

The $75 which must accompany each official protest was returned to the Vancouver club.

CHANGED MINDS

"I gave them every opportunity to back out of it," league commissioner George Wainborn said, describing a meeting in which Ellison left with his manager and coach to discuss the matter before withdrawing the protest.

In order to avoid future complications, a league meeting will be held Tuesday to clarify the overtime situation. The situation by previous arrangement calls for no overtime play for the Shamrocks on the Mainland so that the Island club can return home the night of the game.

"In all fairness," Wainborn said, "we shouldn't have overtime in any game involving Victoria."

Tonight Shamrocks get a chance to take over undisputed possession of first by meeting the Adanacs in Coquitlam.

Kapp Case Adjourned To June 29

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Supreme Court action initiated by B.C. Lions quarterback Joe Kapp was adjourned Friday to June 29.

Kapp launched the action Tuesday asking damages against the Lions football club and an order that his suspension by the Canadian Football League member be lifted.

The Lions suspended Kapp June 9. The club said he was suspended for alleged breach of his contract with the Lions arising out out of his activities, negotiations and arrangements with the Houston Oilers of the American Football League.

ENGINE SIZE LIMITED

U.S. Fears Knockout In European Races

DETROIT (AP) — A ruling cutting down the size of prototype sports cars racing for the manufacturers championship "may well knock the United States out of long distance racing," Carroll Shelby said today.

Shelby's, who's Ford-powered Cobras won the World Manufacturers Championship in 1965, said:

"As far as I'm concerned it's kind of a kick in the face for America."

The International Sporting Commission, which sets the rules for the manufacturers competition, announced the decision was made in Paris June 13, just two days after a seven-litre Ford prototype won the 24-hour Le Mans race.

Seven - litre Fords finished 1-2-3 at Le Mans in 1966.

CONCERNED WITH SPEED

A spokesman for the International Automobile Federation, the sporting commission's parent group, said the French Government was concerned about the speeds—more than 214 miles an hour—reached by the Fords on the long straights.

Starting next year, engine sizes will be limited to three litres, or 183 cubic inches. Ford and Chaparral—the other major American entry — have been running with seven - litre engines, 427 cubic inches.

Shelby said he and Dan Gurney, one of the drivers in the winning Ford at Le Mans, have a company called All-American Racers which has a three-litre engine designed from the ground up. With such an engine, Gurney won the Belgian Grand Prix race at Spa last week.

"As far as I know, that's the only engine being built in this country that can compete."

CLAYTON IN LEAD

Birdies Chirp For East Pro

TORONTO (CP)—Dave Clayton fired a brilliant five-under-par 67 Friday to take a two-stroke lead into today's final round of the 54-hole Millar Trophy golf tournament.

The 26-year-old Toronto pro turned in a string of six birdies at nearby Richmond Hill for a two-stroke lead over favorite Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., who fired a par 72 at Brampton, and Gary Bowerman of Toronto.

The Millar is being played on two courses this year to accommodate a field of 250 amateurs and professionals.

The opening leader, Gary Fawcett, of London Ont., soared to eighth place as he shot a 77 and 146 total.

Bob Cox of Vancouver fired his second consecutive 72 and a 144 total for fourth place.

Bob Rose, Ken Girard and Bob Breen, all of Toronto, have totals of 145. Girard covered Brampton in 69, seven strokes better than his opening round.

Billy Wakeham of Victoria complained of a bad back on the Brampton course but managed 78 for a 149 total.

VISITORS PLACE

Ken Fulton of Winnipeg was one of many out-of-Ontario golfers who made a fine showing with his 73 for a 147 and a two-way tie for ninth place.

The cut-off for today's round is 156.

The Millar is one of eight provincial elimination tournaments which will qualify a Canadian pro, along with George Knudson who already qualifies on the basis of this year's tournament play, and one amateur, for the World Open tournament at Woodbridge, Ont., in September.

KNUDSON'S world of GOLF

The gold tour takes the professionals to Cleveland this weekend for their very-rich $103,500 open and I was asked, on my way to Victoria, why did I pass up that event.

Primarily, of course, is the long-standing commitment to play Al Geiberger in Sunday's match for the Shell television series, Wonderful World of Golf. But the fact of the matter is, I don't play in as many tournaments as do most of my fellow pros.

Why?

It's simple: 1, I'm not strong enough; and 2, I don't want to.

Every golfer has a different attitude towards tournament golf.

With me, I consider it to be my year-round business. I know I'm going to hole the odd iron shot, I'm going to hit bad shots, and I'm going to be up for some tournaments more than I am for others.

A golfer must accept these things.

For instance, I want to feel excitement in a tournament. If I go to the first tee and I don't feel butterflies, I know I'm disinterested.

Consequently, I pick my spots. Playing every week wouldn't be right for me.

★ ★ ★

People don't realize how important that first hole is in a tournament. Making par on that first hole is like getting a birdie on the 72nd.

The way I play, I'm happy to make par at the beginning.

I'm not really trying to do much in those first two rounds except position myself in the field.

But, for the final two rounds I have an entirely different attitude. By that time I'll know the course better and what may have been two putts in the first two rounds suddenly may become one putt.

It's like bringing a pimple to a head.

You begin charging in the final two rounds and you know that on those last nine holes in the tournament, you're going to exhaust yourself completely.

I'm not physically as strong as many golfers, so I can't play all out from the first hole.

★ ★ ★

If I went full throttle from the beginning, I don't think I'd last. When Sunday rolled around, I'd have nothing left. I'd start hitting erratic shots and collapse.

There are two tournaments I try to play all out—the Masters and the Canadian Open, mainly because they are the most important to me—and then, usually, I take a couple of weeks rest before playing them.

But my attitude isn't entirely new.

Remember when that man Ben Hogan was at his best? He charged and would wind up with something like 73-70-68-66.

I'd take those scores every week.

GEORGE'S TIP

When in the fairway bunker, your biggest problem is uncertain footing. To compensate for this, we restrict the swing to a shoulder turn, remaining flat-footed throughout. If the shot would normally call for a five-iron on the fairway, use a four. Always go up one club and choke up a bit. The extra club will compensate for the restricted swing.

DISTAFF DIVOTS

Colwood Leads Inter-Club Event

Royal Colwood ladies are putting up a strong bid for the Paterson Cup.

The Colwood team, playing on its home course, defeated Victoria 19½-16½ in the first half of the inter-club competition.

But individual honors among the distaff divoters went out to Edna Hay and Joan Mitchell.

Mrs. Hay scored a net 77 to capture medallist honors in the qualifying round for the George Collier Trophy at Glen Meadows.

At Cedar Hill, Mrs. Mitchell's net 65 topped the weekly medal round.

★ ★ ★

OTHERWISE: Gorge Vale members stepped out with their mates today in the annual Mr. and Mrs. tournament . . . Colwood's ladies were paired off for the Wilson Trophy hunt . . . Irene Bowe and Eileen Mann retained the Cedar Hill buttons although finishing all square with challengers Muriel Elliott and Lilla Mess . . . Winners of a putting competition at Colwood were Mrs. A. Thomson, Miss G. Sluggett, and Mrs. F. Corbett.

City Pair Needs Help To Games

University of Victoria students Bob Ireland and Ann Jeffrey have been invited to attend a three-week training camp session being held in Winnipeg to determine members of the Canadian volleyball team in the coming Pan-American Games.

The National Amateur Sport and Fitness Council has offered to provide financial assistance to the Canadian Volleyball Association to help defray camp costs. The balance must be raised by the Volleyball Association.

Each region has been asked to raise money to cover the costs of its own people. Victoria volleyball officials hope to raise $300.

Anyone interested in donating to the fund is asked to contact Don Smythe at Victoria High School.

Twins Get a Lift —Just by Chance

DEAN CHANCE . . . fine three-hitter

(By Associated Press)

Dean Chance pitched a brilliant three-hitter and Harmon Killebrew provided the game's only run with his 22nd homer of the year as Minnesota Twins nipped Chicago White Sox 1-0 Friday night.

It was a change of pace for Cal Ermer, the Twins' new manager. In 15 previous games, his staff had managed just three complete games and had allowed four or more runs 10 times.

Chance's effort was the top individual pitching job in the American League where California Angels blanked Kansas City Athletics 2-0, New York Yankees dropped Detroit Tigers 3-1, Washington Senators nipped Baltimore Orioles 3-2 and Boston Red Sox battered Cleveland Indians 8-4.

In the National League, Roger Maris socked an eighth-inning homer—his fifth of the season—to carry St. Louis' streaking Cardinals past the Philadelphia Phillies, 3-2, and stretch their lead to three games.

In other NL action, Pittsburgh Pirates scored three runs in the ninth inning for a 4-2 victory over second-place Cincinnati; Atlanta Braves ran its winning streak to four games by trouncing New York Mets 12-4; San Francisco Giants smacked Los Angeles Dodgers 7-1, and Chicago Cubs nipped Houston Astros 9-8.

Left-hander Mike McCormick scattered nine hits and rapped a two-run homer as the Giants trimmed the Dodgers for the sixth time in seven meetings this year. Willie Mays also homered for San Francisco.

HAS FIRST LOSS

Chance outduelled Joel Horlen, who lost his first game after eight victories.

The victory ended a three-game losing string for Chance and made him the American League's first 10-game winner at 10-5.

Killebrew's 375 - foot shot in the seventh inning gave him the major league home run lead over Baltimore's Frank Robinson, who has 21.

Al Downing pitched a six-hitter for the Yankees and belted one of three solo homers that accounted for all of New York's runs against Detroit's Denny McLain.

Steve Whitaker and Tom Tresh had the other Yankee homers.

Paul Casanova ripped a three-run homer off Steve Barber, giving the Senators all their runs against the Orioles.

Casanova's shot followed singles by Frank Howard and Cap Peterson after Barber had retired the first 11 Senators in order.

Joe Foy hammered two triples and two singles as the Red Sox clawed the Indians.

Tony Conigliaro drove in two runs with a homer and a single and Carl Yastrzemski also stroked a pair of hits. Lee Stange went the distance for the victory, losing his shutout in the last two innings after the Red Sox had run up an 8-0 lead.

RACING at Western Speedway this evening is up-and-coming stock car driver Tony Mortel. Over 60 cars are slated to appear during special "Kids' Night" meet, starting with time trials at 7 p.m.

Players Approve Grid Pension Plan

(Times News Services)

Players in the Canadian Football League voted acceptance Friday of a 17-point pension plan recommendation which calls for each team to pay $300—to be matched by the players—into the fund each year.

The plan, approved by the league's nine clubs earlier, now goes to a firm of consultants to be put into proper order so bids for the pension contract may be called for.

Gary Schreider, retired defensive halfback who played with Ottawa, British Columbia and Hamilton, said the plan should be in operation this year.

FIELDGATE NAMED

Schreider, at the CFL players' association annual meeting Friday, was re-elected president. Norm Fieldgate of B.C. Lions was named vice-president, and Oscar Kruger, former Edmonton Eskimo, treasurer.

Schreider said he could disclose few details of the plan except to say it provides a pension starting between the ages of 55 and 65.

The meeting, at which all nine clubs were represented, voted to investigate the possibility of holding an annual all-star game.

WEBSTER LOSES

Elsewhere in football, the news wasn't as good for Mike Webster, the burly homebrew tackle traded last week by B. C. Lions to Montreal Alouettes.

Webster lost an appeal Friday for an assault conviction.

Judge W. A. Schultz in county court upheld the maximum $500 fine imposed by Magistrate Douglas Hume, but cancelled a one-month jail sentence.

Thomas Peterson, convicted with Webster, also lost his appeal but was excused two weeks in jail that Magistrate Hume had given him along with a $250 fine.

Webster and Peterson were charged with assaulting Edward Rathgeber March 3 following a traffic argument. Both admitted they had punched Mr. Rathgeber.

Softball's Scene All Serene As Oster Returns to Helm

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria Carlings have made their peace with John Oster, and vice-versa, and the Senior Men's Softball League is sailing on placid waters.

A special meeting of players of all five league teams was held Thursday night. After the meeting, Oster decided to return as president of the league.

"When I saw how much all the players were behind me," he said, "I felt I had to return."

With most of the players from the five teams on hand, it was reported that only two individuals voted against Oster in a vote of confidence.

Oster had resigned earlier in the week after a flareup that centred around Carlings, currently embroiled with Luckies in a nip-and-tuck fight for first place.

SUSPENSIONS STAND

Two Carling players were suspended. Infielder Bob Holness, the league's most valuable player last season, was set down for five games and outfielder Harvey Stephenson drew a two-game sitout.

Oster tendered his resignation after charging the Carls had insulted his wife during the Central Park eruption in a game last Sunday which brought on the two players' suspensions.

In confirming his return as president, Oster said the suspensions "will stand."

Before Oster returned to the presidency, members of the Carlings expressed dismay and "some regret" at all the criticism directed at them "by the league, the press and, in all probability, by half the softball fans in Victoria."

HAD TO REPLY

Two members of the team, Ken Griffin and Tom Hardy, felt much of the criticism was unwarranted.

Hardy said the team "was put into a position where we have to express some of our opinions" because none of the players "want to jeopardize a sponsorship or their love for the game."

Said Griffin: "We're all anxious to clear the air. We think we have a good league—the best on Vancouver Island. The team wants to keep it that way.

WORKS BOTH WAYS

"The president said he wants the backing of all the teams. That's fine, but it works the other way. If a team feels it is being wronged, and tenders a legitimate beef, it (the team) should be given a fair and sincere hearing."

Carlings, said Griffin, believe "some aspect of league umpiring can be improved." Specifically, Griffin felt that there have been instances of an official "baiting" players.

"The Carlings' team would like it to be regarded as constructive criticism . . . but we think all the umpires should sit down periodically, with the league executive or the managers, and assess their work."

Commented Oster: "If Carlings or any team has something to say, the door is always open. It's in the constitution. But it has to be submitted in the proper manner . . . by the manager.

"We've already had meetings with the head umpire (Charlie Stevenson). There have been one or two points brought up, and corrections were instigated."

If Bonar Sings, Here's the Tune

If Bonar Hannay, the softball coach, had anything to sing about today he'd probably hum a piece that came off Broadway and began: "It's the wrong time . . . and the wrong place . . ."

That's how it was Friday night with Bonar's Colony Inn entry in the Senior Men's Softball League.

Bonar's boys belted out a stirring "hit tune" of their own. But, as in the Broadway bit, "the wrong time . . . the wrong place."

Consequently, Luckies came out best, 4-2, in their Central Park set-to.

Luckies' pitcher Glen Langsett won it, his 12th victory against only two setbacks. Tough in the clutch, Langsett won despite the fact no one belted him as hard or as often this season as did Colony Inn on Friday.

Langsett was racked for 11 hits, including three by Don Paulin and two each by Derek Stone and Wayne King. But Luckies, restricted to only six hits, were the opportunists. They packed two hits in with errors to produce their runs in the fourth and sixth.

League play continues tonight. Rescheduled from Tuesday, and starting at 6:45, is an argument between Luckies and Red Lions. On Sunday, the busy-beaver Luckies meet Nanaimo Tally-Ho in a two-game exhibition (2 and 6 p.m.) series.

The winners, coached by Rosaleen Williams, include captain Nicki Wallace, Barb McMaster, Myff Owen, Dana Hagel, Mary Joyce, Kim Gibbons, Sharman Blascheck, Gail Vantreight, Gail MacDonald, Susan Hartley, Linda Bricker and Pat Sowerby.

RCs Accept Membership In Council of Churches

Bishop Remi De Roo and the Roman Catholic priests of Greater Victoria are now full members of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

Previously they attended council meetings as observers.

Rev. Samuel Parsons, DD, president of the council, announced Friday that admission of the Roman Catholic Church has been achieved with full agreement on both sides.

"With this significant addition to its strength, the council will be able to speak and act on behalf of the vast majority of Christians in the Greater Victoria area," Dr. Parsons said.

"We are happy and deeply gratefull that, moved by the holy spirit, the Roman Catholic Church is now part of our membership.

"Not only has the council enlarged its membership, it has also defined more clearly the work of its various committees."

MORE DYNAMIC ROLE

Dr. Parsons said this is particularly true of the social action committee, which is now empowered to play a much more dynamic role in the field of social welfare.

"We shall work together wherever possible in close cooperation with civic and voluntary organizations."

A new inter-faith committee has been formed, with Monsignor Michael O'Connell, chancellor of the Roman Catholic diocese of Victoria, as chairman.

The object of this committee will be to promote mutual understanding and co-operation among various religious faiths.

Bishop Denys Rankilor, chairman of the council's public relations committtee, said the idea of inter-church co-operation is now commonplace as far as the public is concerned.

ANNUAL FESTIVAL of St. Paul's Garrison Church, Esquimalt, was held in the church grounds this afternoon. Mrs. J. McKinnon (left) and Mrs. J. E. Bulmer were among the hostesses.

DEACON SAYS:

'Murder Is Not The Answer'

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Church Editor

Married couples who seek abortion for selfish reasons are committing murder.

So says Rev. Walter Donald, recently appointed deacon at Christ Church Cathedral.

"There is no basis for the belief that an unborn child is not an individual. Medical science shows that the unborn infant has a blood system entirely separate from the mother and father.

"It is false to say that the infant does not have an individuality of its own."

Mr. Donald admitted there are some cases where abortion is justified.

"But the evasion of responsibility, or the desire for a so-called good time, is not one of them. The mother who submits to abortion for such reasons suffers deeply from frustration of her instincts.

"Such frustrations cannot be regarded lightly—they have a profound effect on mind, body and spirit."

Mr. Donald believes abortion is one of the greatest social problems today.

"While we should approach the problem with the greatest sympathy, we must recognize that any kind of blanket legislation in favor of abortion would be very dangerous.

MR. DONALD
. . . two play game

"If a girl is raped—perhaps through innocence or lack of comprehension — society must take the responsibility and everything possible should be done for her.

"In the average case, the boy and girl should remember they both played the same game. They must be responsible for the child they produce, and murder is not the answer."

Born in Toronto, Mr. Donald was ordained only recently at St. Barnabas Anglican Church. He was then appointed deacon at Christ Church Cathedral by Dean Brian Whitlow, DD.

While studying theology at the Anglican Theological College in Vancouver, he started an open-line radio program entitled God Talks.

ENCOURAGING

Listeners were invited to ask religious questions of Mr. Donald and clergymen of other faiths—and the response was very encouraging.

Since coming to Victoria, Mr. Donald has campaigned for a similar program. Last Wednesday he made his debut, with a panel of United, Presbyterian and Roman Catholic clergy, on CJVI.

"I was much encouraged by the response we received," he said. "Many of the questions were concerned with abortion, but there were many others and some of them dealt with the Hippies.

"Many of the listeners seemed deeply concerned about them."

Mr. Donald has no faith in direct radio broadcasts of church services.

"I believe all broadcast programs should be specially adapted to radio," he said. "I know many hospital patients and shut-ins like to hear services of worship.

"The answer is to have special radio services. This has been done very successfully by the BBC, and I think the CBC should follow their example.

"We might also consider providing tape-recorded services for the hospitals and nursing homes."

Common Law Unions Reviewed

HAMILTON (CP)—The United Church of Canada is considering special church services to give blessings to some of Canada's 200,000 common law marriages, says a Hamilton minister.

Rev. H. N. Hillyer, spokesman for a group of Hamilton ministers working toward the change, said a morally-sound common law union is acceptable to God and should be publicly blessed by the church.

The division of congregational life and work of the United Church soon will study the feasibility of services that would provide church blessings on such relationships.

Rankilor To Attend Ceremonies

Bishop Denys Rankilor will represent Victoria at ceremonies marking the centennial confederation at Parliament Hill, Ottawa, on Canada Day, July 1.

He will be presented to Queen Elizabeth with members of the Interfaith Commission from across Canada.

Bishop Rankilor is bishop primus of the Reformed Episcopal Church in Canada and rector of Victoria's Church of Our Lord.

He is an original member of the Vanier Institute of the Family, set up by the late Governor-General George Vanier, and of Canada's Interfaith Commission.

THANKSGIVING

In Ottawa in the presence of the Queen, Prime Minister Pearson and members of the Senate and Commons, a service of praise and thanksgiving will be held on Parliament Hill July 1 at 10 a.m.

The Queen will give the address.

"Our corporate work in the interfaith commission over the past three years has fostered mutual understanding among Canadians of all faiths," Bishop Rankilor said.

"We are honored that Her Majesty will attend our centennial celebrations and for her keen interest in the nation-wide work of the Interfaith Commission."

Paperback Outselling Them All

NEW YORK (AP)—The current wonder of the United States publishing world is a paperback book that has sold more than 3,000,000 copies since it came out last Sept. 15.

It isn't stocked in the regular bookstores or in the more than 100,000 retail outlets—newsstands, drugstores, supermarkets, novelty stores—that display the latest mass market paperbacks.

It never has had any paid advertising.

Yet it is at least matching, and apparently surpassing, the sales of the most phenomenal commercial paperbacks.

When all the figures are in, it may prove to be the best seller of all.

It is sold mostly by mail order, and mostly in quantity lots.

Though it is a fat, 599-page volume, it costs only 25 cents. And because many donors buy copies to distribute, thousands of people have received it free.

Its title is Good News for Modern Man.

Its subtitle is The New Testament in Today's English Version.

It is published by the American Bible Society, a non-profit organization devoted to dissemination of the Scriptures.

Essentially the book is a New Testament in short, plain words that can be understood by anyone with a grade school acquaintance with English—say at about Grade 5.

FOCUS

By BRAD NUGENT

I thought Expo 67 was a national thing!

It seems that on the roster of the 52 Canadian groups appearing at the Garden of Stars there are only four from Western Canada. The Maritime provinces aren't even recognized whereas Montreal is represented by 25, yes 25, groups.

When plans were first drawn up this was to be a national effort. Montreal and Toronto were to be classified the same as Winnipeg or Vancouver and so on.

But now The King Beezz and The Royal Family from Edmonton, The Stampeders from Calgary and Vancouver's Nocutrnals will be the only representatives from this part of Canada.

All groups were to be paid $1,100 for a seven-day, two hours per day engagement and I know of at least 20 Western Canadian groups who applied fully understanding that after travelling expenses were taken from the $1,100 not much would remain. Therefore one can easily see it wasn't just a lack of applications.

Ending with this rather questionable selection of musical units makes me wonder who made the final decisions? Obviously it must have been a Montrealer.

It's unfortunate an example can't be made of these errors or short-sightedness so they can be avoided the next time, but who can wait . . . 100 years?

BITS AND PIECES

The British group, The Move, has apparently been pulled out of their Expo date because of a U.S. tour that came up. I guess they'll be replaced by a Montreal group. Who else? . . . Still on the Expo scene, The Young Rascals, Paul Revere and The Raiders, Gordon Lightfoot, Bobby Goldsboro, John Hammond, Petula Clark and The Seekers have just finished gigs there Scheduled for shows in July are The Lovin' Spoonful, The Blues Project and the Paul Butterfield Blues Band. . . . There seems to be ever increasing rumors that The Monkees may be in for some difficulty. Seems that the brain behind them, Don Kirshner has started to raise the axe. Davy Jones is the oonly one who's remained loyal to Kirshner and it's quite easy to see what that could mean, being as he is the most popular of the group. . . .

James Brown fans will be happy to know that his new album "Raw Soul" should be in the stores just about now. Meanwhile, his new single "Let Yourself Go" is already starting to make a move on the charts . . . Gene Pitney, who is estimated to travel as much as 100,000 miles a year, is set for another world tour. This time his itinerary lists visits to England, Italy, Australia, and New Zealand with a possibility of additional dates in Hong Kong and Japan. His schedule set-up has him flying back and forth between Italy, England, and the U.S. several times before the end of the summer. August will see him in Canada for a two-week tour.

The Mothers of Invention opened their new musical spectacle, "Absolutely Free" which was entitled "Pigs and Repugnant" until 48 hours before curtain time. The musical was conceived by the Head Mother, Frank Zappa. Regarding the last minute title change Zappa insists that titles are meaningless and there is apparently no connection with the release of their new album, "Absolutely Free" and claims it "is sheer coincidence." Music and lyrics for the show were all composed by Zappa and include such candidates for show tune nostalgia as Suzy Cream cheese, What's Got Into You?, Hungry Freaks Daddy, Call Any Vegetable, and Brown Shoes Don't Make It. Seems good old Frank has done it again.

'Woman Overcharged By $1,100'

A 95-year-old woman identified her signature on eight cheques totalling $1,234 in central court Friday in a preliminary hearing into a fraud charge against Richard Scott of A & A Contractors.

Miss Emily Dunleavy, the landlady of a two-storey four-unit apartment at 218-226 Michigan, said she had paid the money for repairs to the apartment done by the contracting firm in the spring.

The Crown called expert witnesses who testified the repair work they examined at the apartment was worth between $109 and $120.

Miss Dunleavy said she authorized the repairs without knowing what they would cost after a man told her flooring on a porch was rotten and if anyone put their foot thorugh it, it would cost more to repair than it would to have it fixed now.

HEARING FAILING

"If I'd known as much as I do now he'd never have had the job at all," she said.

Miss Dunleavy, who said she was "just getting into" her 96th year and admitted to failing eyesight and hearing, said she wanted the work done in a hurry because she was afraid the porch was not safe.

Robert Chornoby, a carpenter for 20 years and a man who had done odd jobs around the apartment, said he had taken into account cost of lumber, labor, brick, mortar and siding in arriving at his $116 figure for the value of the repairs.

"There wasn't anything else that was new or I would have seen it. I know that building pretty well, he said.

CONTRACTOR

A building contractor for 37 years, M. P. Paine said he calculated the cost of the new work he saw at $112.20. Edwin Phillips, an executive with a construction firm, arrived at an estimate of $109.66.

City building inspector Alexander James said Scott had pointed out what repairs were done, noting work on the roof, gutters, two chimneys, posts, siding and porch flooring and valuing it at $1,076.

Mr. James said his estimate of the work was "not over $120".

The hearing continues before Magistrate William Ostler Tuesday B. K. Arlidge is appearing for Scott and J. W. Anderson is Crown prosecutor.

104-Foot Floating Palace

Home is what you make it.

In the case of Howard McGregor he chose to make it a 104-foot floating palace.

The grey-haired U.S. industrialist brought his sleek home, the Kakki M into Victoria's Inner Harbor this week on a shakedown cruise.

Built of B.C. yellow cedar, the Seattle-built craft was still tied up in front of the Empress Hotel this morning.

Upon leaving Victoria, Mr. McGregor will take his boat through the Panama Canal to Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

President of the 2,000-employee National Twist Drill and Tool Co., of Rochester, Mich., he will interrupt the voyage with the occasional flight back to attend company business.

Ceremony Of Flags Impressive

For the third time in less than a month crowds jammed the Dallas Road waterfront.

But this time they weren't watching ships—they were watching the men who sail them.

In an impressive half-hour Ceremony of the Flags, Friday night, the navy proved it's as good on land as it is on water.

As the sun set bandsmen led a color party, honor guard and gun crews onto the soccer pitch.

While the color party, carrying flags of each province, lined up across the field, the band marched the gun crews into position then executed a slow march past the reviewing stand.

It was a stirring moment as 98-year-old James Badcock, oldest resident of Veterans' Hospital, took the salute.

Watching were 25 fellow veterans from the hospital and hundreds of others in the crowd.

The color party then precision marched through the band line abreast.

The guard fired the salute followed by trooping of the colors.

Put His Spirit

"Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put His spirit upon them!" (Numbers 11:29.) These words of Moses will conclude the Responsive Reading in a Bible lesson on "Christian Science" to be read in all branch churches on Sunday.

$171,000 IN BANK ROBBERIES OVER SIX YEARS

FBI Believe Man 'Commuter Bandit'

PITTSBURGH (AP)—A quiet, amiable grocer, arrested by the FBI at his small store Friday, is charged with a 1963 armed robbery that netted $9,000 from a downtown Pittsburgh bank.

FBI agents say they believe grocer William E. Zeiler, 52, may be the "commuter bandit"—an elusive gunman who has been blamed for 16 area bank robberies, netting $171,000, since 1961.

Zeiler, a father of four, was arrested Friday at his store, Bill's Market, located in a run-down section of Pittsburgh's North Side.

The burly grocer, who faces a hearing Monday, says he is not the commuter bandit—that it's all a mistake. At his arraignment, he told U.S. Commissioner Alex McNaugher he could not post $50,000 bond.

Police said Zeiler's fingerprints match those found on the getaway car used in the Sept. 23, 1963, holdup.

COOL APPROACH

Witnesses have said the commuter bandit calmly enters a bank, shoves a note and a paper bag to a teller, then casually leaves.

On several occasions, hidden cameras have recorded the bandit walking unnoticed past bank customers, a bag stuffed with money in one hand and a gun in the other.

Zeiler resembles the composite sketches police artists have drawn from witnesses' descriptions and his physical characteristics match those of the bandit.

But he doesn't live like a man who has taken more than $171,000 out of banks in the last 5½ years.

He works in old slacks and a sports shirt and his neighbors say he lives quietly with his wife and children in an apartment above his store.

Controversial Warren Report To Be Analyzed

TESTING RIFLE of same make and model as that owned by Lee Harvey Oswald are Maryland state troopers. Warren Report on President Kennedy assassination will be reviewed on three consecutive evenings by CBS News starting Sunday at 10 on Channels 7, 12.

From Altgens to Zapruder, both of whom recorded the murder of President John F. Kennedy on film, CBS news has interviewed scores of individuals who were touched by events in Dallas's Dealey Plaza or who have become the critics and defenders of the official report on the assassination.

Rifle and camera experts, pathologists and psychologists, eyewitnesses, writers and public officials who have studied the report and the questions it has raised, are among those questioned by CBS News.

Many of them will be shown during a CBS News inquiry, "The Warren Report," the broadcasts to be presented for three consecutive nights starting Sunday night at 10 on Channels 7, 12; also Monday and Tuesday at the same hour.

The series will be narrated by Walter Cronkite.

Among those scheduled to appear on the broadcasts are:

James Altgens, Associated Press photographer in Dallas. He took pictures at the time of the assassination. The pictures were studied by the Warren Commission, before which Altgens later testified.

Dr. Luis Alvarez, professor of physics at the University of California. Examining the Abraham Zapruder amateur film of the assassination, he discovered evidence that the first shot would have been fired earlier than was estimated by the Warren Commission.

Andrew Armstrong, Jack Ruby's assistant at the Carousel Club in Dallas at the time of the assassination. He talks about Ruby as he know him before and after the assassination.

Dr. James Beyer, pathologist, who has worked in the field of experimental wound ballistics. Editor of and contributor to the volume on wound ballistics in the historical series for the U.S. Army surgeon general.

Johnny Brewer, shoe-store manager in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas, where officer J. D. Tippit was killed. He saw Oswald acting suspiciously in front of his store as a police car passed, followed Oswald to the Texas theatre and talked with the cashier, who called police.

Ted Callaway, used-car salesman in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas. He saw Oswald rush past his lot with a pistol and called, "What's going on?" Oswald shrugged and went on.

'Our World'

Since he climbed down from the trees some 10,000,000 years ago, probably man's most frustrating, yet most rewarding endeavor, has been communication.

He refined his language to a subtle, constantly expanding way of exchanging and commenting upon ideas, and so came closer to those immediately around him. He invented the sail and the wheel and at once expanded his horizons enormously. Other doorsteps and philosophies were suddenly part of his world.

But time and distance always limited the extent and immediacy of his communication; so, because his reach has usually exceeded his grasp, he persisted until he had invented faster, easier ways of sharing his ideas and making the world more of a family with photography, railways, wireless, steamship, TV, air travel and satellites.

And now, his longed-for feat of total global awareness and unity at a given moment, an instantaneous audio-visual world communication, will be attempted in an historic two-hour television special entitled "Our World," Sunday morning at 11:45 on Channel 2.

Eighteen nations were scheduled to take part but the number was cut to 13 when Communist countries pulled out to protest reporting of the Middle East crisis by western TV stations.

'Valiant Hearts'

A film account of the pilgrimage last summer by 31 Newfoundland First World War veterans to battlefields in France, will be shown on CBC-TV's Centennial documentary series 20-20, Saturday night at 6 on Channel 2.

The veterans are members of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, part of a vanguard of French, British and Commonwealth soldiers who, on July 16, 1916, launched one of the fiercest and bloodiest attacks of the war.

The Royal Newfoundland Regiment, 800-strong, went into action near the French villages of Beaumont and Hamel. In less than 20 minutes 700 of them were killed or wounded.

On July 16, 1966, the 50th anniversary of that terrible morning, the 31 Newfoundland veterans took part in ceremonies of remembrance for those who fell in the Battle of the Somme.

This color program, entitled Valiant Hearts and produced by CBC-TV in St. John's Nfld., is an account of the pilgrimage by the Newfoundland veterans including arrival in London and a brief sightseeing tour which took in Edinburgh and Ayr in Scotland. The regiment trained in Ayr.

From there the veterans went to the Beaumont-Hamel battlefield, which has been preserved with the trenches, shell holes and equipment as they were left 50 years ago.

Pro Soccer

The Chicago Spurs meet one of the league's strongest defences when they face the Philadelphia Spartans in a National Professional Soccer League game in color on the CBS television network Sunday at 2:30 on Channel 12.

Jack Whittaker will describe the play-by-play and Danny Blanchflower will be the analyst on the broadcast, which will originate in Temple University Stadium, Philadelphia.

The Spartans have two of the strongest goalkeepers in the league in Ernesto Lopera and newly acquired Gernot Fraydl, former Austrian international. They also have one of the loop's top scorers in Orlando Garro, forward from Colombia.

Great Movies

A sensitive performance by Sidney Poitier won for him the 1963 Academy Award as best actor in the film Lilies of the Field, which will be seen on CBC-TV's Great Movies Saturday night at 9 on Channels 2 and 6.

Poitier is cast as an ex-soldier, wandering on his way to nowhere in particular, who comes across a group of foreign nuns who have been willed some land in the Arizona desert. They have fled from East Germany, and, unable to speak English, are floundering about trying to build a chapel.

The odds against their success seem insuperable, but the former soldier decides to stay and help them and eventually manages to persuade the nearby townspeople to co-operate with their strange neighbors.

Golf Tourney

The Pacific Northwest's top sports celebrities, plus several big U.S. figures, are at the big beach resort of Ocean Shores for the second annual Pat Boone celebrity classic golf tournament.

The finals of tournament play will be televised live Sunday at 3 on Channel 5.

Collegiate football rivals Jim Owens, of the University of Washington and his coaching counterpart of Washington State, Bert Clark, are taking part along with a host of other key sports celebrities.

Hockey's hottest rivalry, Seattle vs. Portland, will be represented by all-star centre Guyle Fielder of the Totems and Art Jones of the Buckaroos.

Basketball will have its representatives in Husky coach Mac Duckworth, former collegiate All-Americans Bob Houbregs, Dr. Jack Nichols, and Johnny O'Brien.

Famed St. Louis Cardinal pitcher Dizzy Dean, colorful Jimmie Piersall and comic Phil Harris will be among the participants.

Final Broadcast

The singing duo of Esther and Abi Ofarim, the Jefferson Airplane rock-and-roll group, Bette Davis, Tony Randall, Jack Jones and the Krofft Puppets are guest stars on the season's final broadcast of "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour" Sunday night at 9 on Channels 7 and 12.

The Ofarims sing a Spanish flamenco song, "Viva la Feria," and the Israeli folk song "Lailah." The Jefferson Airplane sing their recording hit, "White Rabbit."

In a repeat of highlights of earlier "Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour" broadcasts of the season, Tom and Dick Smithers deliver a comic routine dealing with the controversy to be found in seemingly non-controversial songs, then join Miss Davis in a Marie Antoinette sketch and team up with Jones, Randall and the Krofft Puppets in the dramatization of an original fable, "The Frog Prince."

The series' entire performing company then joins in presenting a grand finale for this show and the completed season.

Stars Show Nervousness As Guests

HOLLYWOOD—Stars seem to be more worried than ordinary mortals about going on game shows as guest celebrities.

"It's different from acting," said host Tom Kennedy. "They have to be themselves on a game show and, being themselves, is one thing they fear. They know what they can do as actors, but they don't know how they'll come off as people. The common comment is, 'I hope I can live up to my image.'"

Still they muster up their courage and take the plunge on such daytime game shows as "You Don't Say!" hosted by Kennedy.

"Stars do it because daytime shows give them the widest and quickest exposure possible," explained Kennedy. "One actress told me she gets bookings all over the country because of appearances on our show. One actor said fans comment more about his appearance, on our show than his own highly successful series."

"You Don't Say!" began in 1963. More than 500 stars have appeared since then, including Jane Wyatt, Brian Keith, Ruta Lee, Jackie Coogan, Rose Marie, John Astin, Shari Lewis, Pat Crowley, Phyllis Kirk, Vera Miles, Tippi Hedren, Leonard Nimoy, Barbara McNair, Mike Connors, Lola Albright, Kelly Smith, Buddy Greco, and Richard Long, among others.

BEST PLAYER

"Pat Carroll has to be the most repeated and best guest player on our show," said Kennedy. "She's been back 12 times. They love her. She has a quality that appeals to people. She's been very successful as a performer but her feet have never left the ground. Two months after she was on our show recently, 50 per cent of our fan mail still concerned her."

The game show is played by two teams, each composed of a guest celebrity and a member from the studio audience. The object is to guess the names of famous people by feeding one's partner incomplete sentences as clues.

Kennedy discussed various guest celebrities.

"Mel Torme is very bright," he said, "Mike Landon is sharp. Rose Marie is bright and knows when to be funny and when to play the game. Ruta Lee, Betty White, Mickey Manners are consistently good. Peter Lawford has wit. Don't let me forget Rowan and Martin. Comedians often bomb out on this kind of a show, but they are funny.

Naval Spectacular on CBC

International Armada Appears In Feature

Vessels from Canada and more than a dozen other nations—the most spectacular naval array ever seen in Canadian waters—will take part in a special Centennial salute at Halifax.

CBC Television will present highlights of activites at Halifax in a one-hour color special entitled Centennial Naval Assembly on Monday night starting at 9 on Channels 2 and 6. Host Alan Millar will describe some of the most colorful events scheduled and will interview visiting naval officers from other countries and other special guests.

Highlight of the telecast will be coverage of Governor-General Roland Michener reviewing the international naval assembly, accompanied by Canadian Rear-Admiral J. C. O'Brien, commander maritime command. The warships—ranging from a small training yacht to heavy cruisers—will be assembled in a 1½-mile line along the Halifax waterfront in ranks stretching from the Angus L. Macdonald Bridge to historic George's Island.

The CBC telecast will also feature coverage of the international naval parade through Halifax, with representatives from each national ship taking part; a colorful fireworks display on George's Island; night-time illumination of the hulls and superstructures of the warships as they lay in Halifax harbor secured to buoys at predetermined stations; and interviews with visiting naval officers.

Navies scheduled to be represented in the Centennial Assembly include those of Great Britain, France, the U.S., Colombia, Denmark, Finland, West Germany, India, Italy, The Netherlands, Norway, Portugal and Sweden.

Following the ceremonies the warships will disperse on June 26 to visit other Canadian ports before returning home or resuming operational duties.

Spotlight

A new, hour-long variety series featuring top international stars premieres on KIRO-TV-7 Tuesday night at 8:30 in color. Taped in London, Spotlight is the summer replacement for "The Red Skelton Hour."

Spotlight will showcase two host-performers and their guests in an hour of comedy and music. Singer Abbe Lane and Noel Harrison—co-star of television's "The Girl from U.N.C.L.E."—will appear as host-performers and English comedian Benny Hill will be one of the scheduled guest stars on the premiere show.

Other stars signed for appearances are Eddie Fisher, Robert Goulet, Milton Berle, Phil Silvers, Liza Minnelli, Eddy Arnold, Phyllis Diller, Diahann Carroll, Polly Bergen, Johnny Mathis, Buddy Hackett, Victor Borge, Bobby Darin, Liberace, Nancy Wilson, Trini Lopez and Frank Gorshin.

Documentary

Daytop Village, described by American psychiatrist Dr. Daniel Casriel as "a breakthrough in the treatment of the drug addict," is the setting for an hour drama-documentary produced by the National Film Board, to be telecast on Wednesday night at 9:30 on Channels 2 and 6. Entitled The Circle, the film stars Don Francks as an addict seeking help at the unique rehabilitation centre on Staten Island, New York.

The Circle is a gripping account of the addict's struggle to escape the tragic "habit" that threatens to destroy him.

Daytop Village is unique in that it is run by ex-addicts who have successfully kicked the habit and who now devote their experience to helping other victims. Says the centre's psychiatric consultant Dr. Casriel, "Daytop challenges the addict to stand on his own feet, rather than permitting him to lie back and wait for others to do everything for him."

Francks, in the central role, is the only actor in The Circle; the "supporting cast" is comprised of people in the real-life situation at Daytop.

Residents come from all walks of life, racial and religious backgrounds. They range in age from 16 to the late 50s, and heroin is their chief addiction.

Three times a week, they participate in "encounters"—group therapy sessions sometimes brutal in their frankness. Those who eventually kick the drug habit return to society at large or, in some cases, remain at Daytop Village to help show others the way out of the drug web.

Variety Hour

Comics Burns and Schreiber, the Doodletown Pipers and Jim (Muppets) Henson's new puppet "Rowlf" will be the stars of Our Place, a 10-week comedy-variety series in color, to be seen starting Tuesday night at 8 on Channels 2 and 6.

PRETTY FIGURE is cut by Carol Lawrence during dance number to be seen on the Dean Martin summer show, with host Vic Damone, Thursday night at 9:30 on Channel 8.

The hour-long show, whose executive producer is Bob Precht, producer of the Ed Sullivan Show, will also have special guest stars each week. Among them: Woody Allen, Carol Burnett, Arthur Godfrey, Dick Shawn and the Smothers Brothers.

Jack Burns and Avery Schreiber, alumni of the famed Second City satirical group, are well known for their characterizations of many North American TV shows. Both have toured extensively with the Second City stage productions, and they are presently working on a new TV comedy series, Don't You Know There's a War On? being written and produced by Wayne and Shuster.

Perhaps their best-known sketch is the one involving a long-suffering New York taxi driver and his loudmouthed passenger from the sticks.

The Doodletown Pipers are 20 attractive and talented young people between the ages of 18 and 21, who sing, dance and play musical instruments. They appear as soloists, in ensemble performance, and in innumerable small combinations, performing all types of popular, folk and light classical music.

The dog puppet "Rowlf" is the creation of Jim Henson, whose Muppets are often seen on the Sullivan and Perry Como shows.

O'Brien Back

O'Brien, as played by fast-talking Peter Falk, gained a following when he appeared in a brief series on CBC-TV a couple of seasons ago. Now he returns in a 12-week series of The Trials of O'Brien (six episodes not seen before on the network, six repeats) on Thursday night at 10 on Channel 2.

Daniel J. O'Brien, the unorthodox hero of the series, is a life-loving and dynamic lawyer, plagued by private problems—notably his ex-wife Katie (played by Joanna Barnes)—and beset by tough cases.

In the first episode of the CBC-TV summer series, The Blue Steel Suite, O'Brien is held hostage by convicts protesting their prison's bad living conditions.

World on Stage

The World on Stage, CBC-TV's Wednesday evening series on the performing arts at Expo, turns to the world of opera for the major portion of its second program, on Wednesday night at 10:30 on Channels 2 and 6. Featured are members of the Royal Stockholm Opera Company, in rehearsal excerpts from The Rake's Progress, by Stravinsky, and Un Ballo in Maschera, by Verdi, at Montreal's Place des Arts.

Also included in the half-hour color program is the churchyard scene from the Stravinsky opera, performed by the company's Ragnar Ulfung and Erik Saeden; and an interview with Ulfung and Kersten Meyer about Ingmar Bergman's stage direction for the Royal Stockholm's stage production of The Rake's Progress.

A baritone with the company, Ingvard Wixell, sings a Swedish folk song.

In other items, the Montreal Brass Quintet plays March, by Ludwig Maurer, and the Estonian Singers perform a folk song.

STARTED WITH SOUSA

Meredith Willson, author of such Broadway shows and films as The Music Man, once played the flute in the John Pilip Sousa band.

WEEK'S WORK

The new growths should be now on rockery plants which were cut back in early May. Take some of these when two inches long as cuttings to root in pots of sandy soil, to make new plants to put out in late September.

Sow seed of perennials: lupin, gaillardia, delphinium, aquilegia. Grow in nursery rows until fall planting out.

Daffodils and all other narcissi will now likely have wilted sufficiently for the bulbs to be dug.

Sow seed of auriculas and other primulas while it is fresh, also seed of meconopsis. Germination is fast and prolific.

German, or bearded irises may be dug and divided right after flowering. This is needed about every third year. Use no peatmoss or fresh manure, but bonemeal and a sunny location.

Early flowering weigelas W. rosea variegata and "Fairy" should have old wood cut back as soon as blooms are over.

Take small side cuttings of rosemary and lavender; root in pots of sandy peatmoss.

If sucker growths appear at base of fruit trees, remove with sharp knife at the source.

Weed, cultivate and water the rows of vegetables.

TIPS TO HOME GARDENERS

Be a Soaker . . . But Not Often

By JACK BEASTALL

Restrictions on sprinkling have no horrors for the home gardener who understands his plants and their needs, for he is not a man who teases them with a dribble of water every day.

Jack

Some 15 years ago, all municipalities on southern Vancouver Island imposed alternate-day garden watering and, to the great surprise of many gardeners, our gardens not only survived but actually improved.

The only argument we can make against such restrictions is the curtailment of what we consider to be our liberties. As far as our plants are comcerned, they would do better still if watering was restricted to once a week.

MUST PENETRATE

We know very well that plants must have water at their roots if they are to live, but how many gardeners who make a habit of watering every day, put on enough water to penetrate down to the roots of their plants?

About 90 per cent of the water used by home gardeners is wasted. It only wets the surface to a depth of one-half inch and then because of the temperature of the surface, evaporates into the air and is lost. In the meantime the plant roots are slowly dying in a soil that is becoming dryer every hour.

Water is not the only essential in the balanced growth of plants, air is just as important.

Terrestrial plants, the ones we have in our gardens, need alternate periods of comparative wetness and dryness; the wet period of sufficient duration for the plants to pick up all the water they need, and the dryer period to allow air to reach the roots for the promotion of growth.

NO SET RULES

While no set rule can be given to suit every soil, every location, and every kind of planting, we can definitely state that better growth and healtier plants are found in gardens that are thoroughly soaked and then left until the soil is comparatively dry.

The length of time that should elapse between waterings depends on the moisture holding capacity of the soil with which the gardener is working. When an adequate amount of compost, or humus, is added every year the time lapse may be from 15 to 30 days.

Soils that lack humus are devoid of the millions of tiny sponges which hold the water until the plants are ready to imbibe.

There is also the ambiguous term "thorough soaking" to be considered. Here again, the length of time needed to thoroughly soak one type of soil may be much longer than is needed for another type.

In general, it takes from four to eight hours continuous watering to apply enough to penetrate eight to ten inches deep, the depth we call the "root area."

How long it will take in your particular soil can only be determined by digging a hole between the plants and finding out just how deep the water has gone.

OVERNIGHT

If your soil requires a full eight hours' watering at one time, it is best to sprinkle overnight between the hours of 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.

During this period the pressure is high and two or three sprinklers can be operated in different parts of the garden. On the other hand, one sprinkler used at night will cover two to three times the area that can be covered during the day when pressure is low.

Aside from the benefit to the plants there is the question of water bills. Is it more expensive to water on the "little and often" principle or to use the "soak and forget" method?

Each gardener must seek the answer for himself. Records of a three-year experiment conducted in adjacent gardens showed a seven-dollar saving on a 60-day water bill in favor of the once-a-month method.

START TOO LATE

Most of us home gardeners start watering far too late in the spring. This year regular watering has been necessary from mid-April, yet there are many lawns that received their first dribble last weekend when the thermometer hit the high 70s.

Once the soil has been allowed to become that dry it takes twice as much water to restore moisture as would have been used in the regular 15 or 30-day soakings since mid-April.

And because so many gardeners suddenly decided to sprinkle, the water pressure dropped to near zero in some areas and sprinkling restrictions were seriously considered.

In an area with nearly every residential lot under cultivation, and with boulevards, parks, and extensive plantings around public and industrial buildings to be maintained we can all help ourselves, our neighbors and the community by approaching the problem of garden watering in a practical way.

Water is plentiful now, but it may not be in ten years time. We must learn to use it wisely and not wastefully, and when we succeed we shall all benefit.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL

Q. What small black beetle attacks my strawberry plants, and what grub enters rose buds and can be found inside the stems immediately below the damaged bud? Mrs. M. W., Duncan.

A. The black beetle is most likely the Strawberry root weevil. For full details and controls write B.C. Dept. of Agriculture, Douglas Block, Victoria, for pamphlet on "Strawberry Weevil."

Grub in rose buds is probably the rose curculio, a beetle with a large snout, controlled with a DDT rose spray, or with a combination rose spray which also takes care of Black Spot. Very common on both wild and cultivated roses.

Q. Can you tell me the name of the small plants with spikes of pinkish-purple flowers which were used in one of the right-hand sections of the Centennial emblem design by the Vancouver Island Nurserymen's Association at the recent flower show? While at the show, I could not find out from anyone. I.N.L., Shawnigan Lake, B.C.

A. There was much interest in this little plant, one of the Primulas, known as P. Vialii, or P. Littoniana. The dense little spikes of flowers open to a violet shade, and are quite perfumed.

Prefabricate Components, New Trend

TORONTO — The increasing use of prefabricated kitchen cabinets based on the principle of modular co-ordination is a prime example of a desirable trend in the manufacture and installation of building components.

K. O. Roos, director of the federal industry department's Wood Products Branch, estimates that of the $75 million dollars worth of wooden kitchen cabinets produced in 1964, installations in new housing accounted for $50 million. Of this latter figure, approximately $30 million was spent on prefabricated factory-made units.

He said it was significant that the production of these factory-made units has increased by 145 per cent in the last five years.

CABINETS

John A. Dawson of the Materials Branch, Department of Industry, notes that over 90 per cent of new homes in Canada contain at least one prefabricated component, generally kitchen cabinets and that the trend today is towards a greater number of prefabricated components in buildings.

He said this trend is being promoted by the Department of Industry's BEAM program which has been initiated to increase productivity and efficiency in the manufacture and use of building equipment, accessories and materials.

A key aim of this program is the greater use of industrialized building systems for which modular co-ordination is a prerequisite, Mr. Dawson said.

STANDARDIZATION

The modular co-ordination concept permits building components to be dimensionally standardized to a specific module. The four-inch module is the generally recognized standard in countries using the duodecimal system of measurement.

As a chap who has no objection to the occasional short smash, I have been wondering for some time what plans if any our Liquor Control Board has for the building vacated by the Fort and Foul Bay Safeway when it flitted to its arch-roofed new quarters.

Standard newspaper procedure in a matter of this sort is to pick up a phone, dial the number of the outfit concerned, and put the question.

However, the jolly elves of the LCB are not precisely chatterboxes, and all I got for my trouble was the usual earful of nothing.

As a further aid to secrecy, somebody has soaped the windows of the building in question on the inside. But the job is less than thorough, and for anyone interested, there are several spots where an enquiring eye applied to the panes can get a middling good notion of what's going on.

Gee ... look at those sets of shelves, decked to just the right height for a reaching arm! And those nice wide market-type aisles down which a whole platoon of shopping buggies might march abreast!

I'm tempted to offer a guess; but perhaps for now, it's enough to suggest that something a little out of the ordinary does seem to be going on in there.

★

The news will out, and a copy of the Times which has lain on a shelf for the past 33 years has been liberated by a Victoria Symphony Society cleanup squad.

This from Symphony vice-president Austin Wright, who tells me that the time-yellowed paper was found while members were putting their new headquarters—the Dunlop building on the former Uvic Lansdowne campus—in shape for occupancy.

The issue was dated Sept. 9, 1934, a day on which the big news was a win by the American yacht Rainbow over the English Endeavor in the America's Cup race.

Our lead editorial weighed the pros and cons of health insurance. A columnist who signed his screed with the initials "W. H. B." (Bruce Hutchison in early career) was holding forth, and the news from Europe was not of the best.

"The ads are interesting, too," says Mr. Wright. "It seems strange now, but back then they were selling pork chops for 24 cents a pound, and a lady's fur-trimmed coat was offered for $19.50."

I note further that Dorothy Dix chose to list the chief faults of husbands . . . and there, time doesn't seem to have changed conditions. Us fellows, dogs that we are, appear to have been very much then as the present finds us.

★

Through most of the year, I lead a pack-rat existence, filing letters and notes in my hip pockets, and tossing anything larger into my desk basket or a handy drawer.

Eventually, though, a day comes when my pockets won't absorb more, or my desk, either.

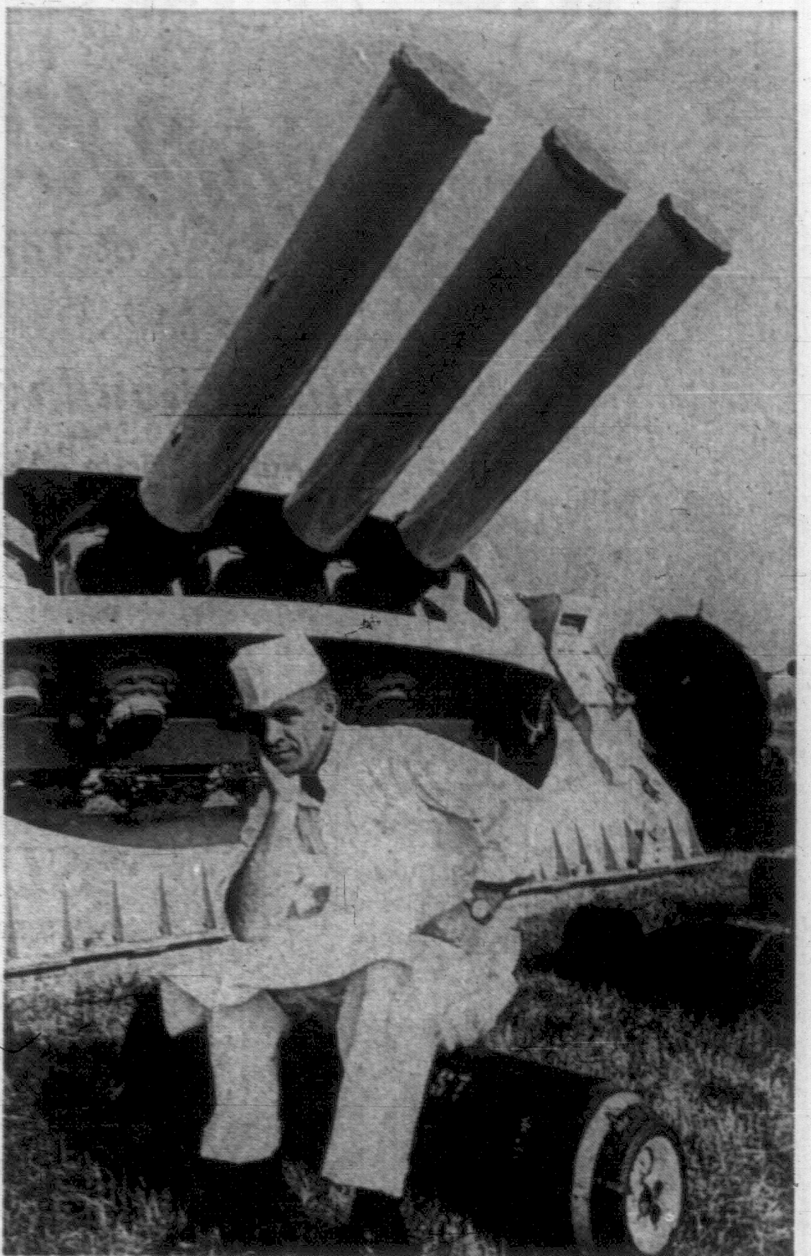
It is then time to put the shop to rights, a chore in which I am now intermittently engaged.

Among the items to term up is a note from a reader who asks me to discuss the subject of university training for writers.

"It seems to me," she says, "that there are two schools of thought: one, that if you have a gift, training is unnecessary and, moreover, can kill creativity; second, it is vital to learn technique, rules of grammar, etc., in order to express and interpret ideas adequately. Can writing be taught, especially journalism, or is it something you have or do not have?"

Starting at the bottom, journalism can be taught, but unless the student has a reasonable measure of intelligence and an enquiring mind, the teaching's wasted.

The ability to write fiction can not be taught, and the course peddler or reading-fee agent who declares that he can make a creative writer out of any and all applicants is selling a lie. The gift is inborn: education can merely burnish it. That, I suggest, is a solid argument, not for specialized training, but for a good general education.



AWAITING EXPLOSION of a different variety to the one he's sitting on this morning was army cook Walter Halusiak. This afternoon the unfortunate Mr. Halusiak was to be bombarded by orders from 1,001 hungry tummies attending Armed Forces Day at Patricia Bay Airport. A cook for the 1st Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles, he took a breather in the shade of a ship's projectile thrower, finding ample seating room on one of the projectiles. (Photo by Bill Halkett)

'BUT WE'RE NOT WORRIED'

Prison Authorities Puzzled By Rash of Escape Attempts

By DON VIPOND

A rash of escape attempts from William Head minimum security prison this year has authorities puzzled but not worried.

Five men have tried to flee the institution 18 miles west of Victoria on the Juan de Fuca Strait in the past six months.

All have failed but the number contrasts sharply with one unsuccessful attempt last year and none the two years before that.

"We've been looking at the cases fairly closely to see the reasons," says superintendent Gamaliel Milner.

But no common factor has been uncovered.

The superintendent does point out that all the would-be escapers are young men in their 20s and that offenders tend to be more immature than their contemporaries in years.

"Possibly attempts are contagious too," says Mr. Milner, "but you'd think the additional time they get would be a deterrent."

Larry William Harvey, 23, captured in Vancouver Thursday, the same day he escaped William Head, was jailed for an extra six months when he appeared in a Vancouver court Friday.

He was given concurrent terms when he pleaded guilty to escaping custody and forging a cheque.

One of the five men who tried to get away was Jewish and he fled at the height of the war in the Middle East for patriotic reasons, to try to join his family in Haifa.

The superintendent suspects the others each had their personal reasons, usually involving families, but the reasons were unconnected.

Between 130 and 140 prisoners are held on William Head's 81 acres and the only obstacle separating them and freedom is an eight-foot wire fence.

Prisoners selected for the minimum security institution are screened to include only those most likely to respond to rehabilitation and the men attend classes in either academic education or construction trades training. Prisoners also handle maintenance chores.

Frequent counts and bed checks are the way the staff keep track of inmates.

KATHLEEN AGNEW
. . . '57 good citizen

MANY BENEFITTED

Lady of Quiet Deeds, Kathleen Agnew Dies

One of Victoria's greatest philanthropists, Miss Kathleen Agnew, died early today at her home at 1013 Vancouver Street.

Esteemed for her quiet good deeds, Miss Agnew was named Victoria's Good Citizen of 1957. She gave her Rockland Avenue house, Schumann, to the women's auxiliary of the Anglican Church as an aged women's home.

"I decided one day that one old lady had to move out so that many old ladies could move in," Miss Agnew said.

She was a life member of more societies and associations than the average person could name. Among them were the YWCA and YMCA, Girl Guides and Boy Scouts.

"I will support any worthwhile community effort," was Miss Agnew's motto.

SEVERAL HELPED

More than several young men and women can thank Miss Agnew for a university education. But, despite her generosity, Miss Agnew would not tolerate inefficiency. She said she once fired a maid because she didn't set the table properly.

Yet her old Chinese gardener was devoted to her and, long after he left her service, Miss Agnew continued calling on him.

She lived on Rockland Avenue for 37 years after her father retired from his Montreal wholesale silk firm in 1933, and brought her mother to Victoria in the hope the mild climate would be kind to her bronchitis.

After the death of her parents, Miss Agnew lived alone among a vast collection of antiques, curios and works of art, and was attended by five servants.

When she moved to Vancouver Street, she gave many of her treaures to friends and to couples getting married.

CAME FROM IRELAND

Her father, William Agnew, came from the town of Larne in Northern Ireland, where Agnews have lived since the 12th century.

Miss Agnew and her brother, Augustus, were born at Montreal and she often told of their happy childhood there, especially at Christmas when the snow was thick and firm.

She went to school at Hanover, Germany, and Paris, France, and became fluent in both French and German. She knew almost every picture in the Louvre at Paris and once stuck out her tongue at the Mona Lisa.

"I hate it," she said.

Some of Miss Agnew's relatives are returning here for the funeral, which will be announced later.

Ask The Times

Q. Must the Campbell River Senior Secondary School accept every student who lives within its school boundaries, as must other public schools? E.G.

A. Yes, says a school board spokesman. All schools in a school district must accept students living within that district, providing age qualifications are met. A student living in one district may go to school in another providing the school is willing to accept the student. In such cases a fee is usually charged.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Please, No More Wampum!

Generosity seems to be as catching as measles.

When the Kuper Island Indian Band fund started it looked as if Victorians and other Islanders were doing a good job of keeping affliction-free. Then suddenly everybody got the giving bug with the result the band fund has now passed the $11,000 mark.

Original target was $9,000.

Purpose of the campaign was to raise enough money to send the 32-piece drum and fife band to Expo this month.

The pupils of S. J. Willis decided this would be their job. Backed by principal Horace Dawson, they organized class projects, formed a small drill team to march with the band in the Victoria Day parade and generally did all they could to publicize the band's need.

The Kuper Island School wasn't idle. The bands played concerts and added more to the fund.

Slowly the idea caught on. Money trickled in at first and then as the fund figure approached the target, it seemed that everybody wanted to back a winner and the target was quickly reached.

Then another $500 was added, then another; then another $1,000, and Friday the bank announced there was $11,255 in the band fund account.

So, thanks, but no more, say the fund trustees.

Names of donors, individual and organizations, will be published in the near future.

Meanwhile the young musicians are preparing for their June 28 departure for Expo and their two days of glory July 3 and 4 when they will appear as Band of the Day at the big fair.

Tugs 'Death Traps,' Claims Union Report

Drastic Steps In Safety Urged

By TERRY IZZARD

Drastic steps must be taken to improve safety regulations aboard B.C. coastal tugs.

In a startling report just released, the Canadian Merchant Service Guild—a merchant officers' union—says many of the boats now operating are potential death traps.

In the past eight years 50 tugs have sunk in B.C. waters alone.

Of the 134 men involved, 29 lost their lives.

And in 90 per cent of the cases the loss was due to human error, the guild claims.

In analyzing cause of the tragedies, a committee of nine marine experts recommend the immediate formation of a marine research and safety program to ensure safe working conditions and habits for all sea-goers.

It also urges some arrangement whereby the provincial government's safety officials be empowered to act under the authority of the department of transport and the Canada Shipping Act.

★

The investigation revealed that:

- Of the 50 boats lost, 29 were wood and 21 steel.
- However, only five men died from the wooden boats (a mere 6.5 per cent of those involved) while 24 men lost their lives on the steel vessels (42.1 per cent).

Commenting on this, the report states: "The main reason for the loss of life on these steel-hulled vessels is that they sink so quickly.

"It is obvious that this very real and dangerous condition must not be allowed to exist."

It recommends that all steel-hulled vessels be fitted with at least three watertight bulkheads, allowing the vessel to remain afloat with any one compartment flooded.

It also urges installation of bilge alarms (a device indicating heavy buildup of fuel) in all watertight comparments.

"Thirteen of these (steel) vessels have sunk for unexplained reasons, but a good many could have been saved if they had been fitted with bilge alarms in all compartments."

The very real danger aboard the steel boats is that they invariably sink within seconds.

This is borne out by the fact that 13 men were actually carried down inside the tug while on the wooden boats there were none.

★

At the same time, 18 of the wooden boats managed to send out Mayday signals before sinking while only one such call was received from any of the steel variety.

Commenting on the causes of accidents, the report says:

"Many individual safety programs have been implemented but most have failed due to the lack of a governing authority.

"There is a great need for research into the causes and prevention of accidents and for an extended program of safety education which the Canada Shipping Act fails to provide.

It notes that 38 of those lost were under 15 gross tons and therefore exempt from steamship inspection.

And only one of the 50 was fitted with an automatic bilge alarm.

One of the biggest factors in loss of tugs has been sinking caused by the vessel being capsized by her own tow.

"There are many factors and variable conditions involved in a vessel being capsized by her own tow, of which human error is the most prevalent.

★

"However, no matter how the vessel is capsized, the most practical method of saving her is to quickly release the towline and the most practical position to do this is from the operating station (wheelhouse) of the tug."

It suggests tugs should all be equipped with quick-release winch brakes which can be operated from the winch itself or from the wheelhouse.

Of the 134 persons involved in sinkings, only 14 made use of lifejackets. It criticizes the fact that present regulations call for stowing of lifejackets in the living accommodation where they are not usually readily accessible if the tug capsizes.

The report suggests additional lifesaving equipment be stowed on deck in a box with a floataway lid, noting: ". . . the majority of these smaller vessels are sadly lacking in modern lifesaving equipment."

Another suggestion is that all tugs be forced to carry marker buoys, enabling rescuers to easily pinpoint a sunken wreck.

In conclusion the report remarks: "The Canada Shipping Act with its archaic rules, regulations and amended amendments does little to provide for the safety of seamen on the majority of the vessels (involved) . . . and then only under extreme provocation."

FULFIL YOUR RACY DREAMS

Do you want to be a racing car driver? Anyone can.

Starting Sunday, San Cobble Raceways in Duncan will feature "run what you brung" races every Sunday.

The races are part of a current fad in the United States. Anyone with a yen to race can come in any old car and enter.

"We will make a safety check of the cars," said track manager Mike Stogrin. "But anyone with a car can enter."

Drowning Inquest Set

An inquest into the drowning of six-year-old David Glanville will be held Thursday night.

Coroner Edmond St. Jorre said today the inquest will open at McCall Brothers, 1400 Vancouver, at 7:30 p.m.

The youngster died in St. Joseph's Hospital just before noon Friday, 18 hours after he was plucked from 12 feet of water in the Gorge by a tug boat captain who ran from a nearby hotel.

David was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Glanville, 1054 Tillicum, and is survived by two sisters, Audrey, 17, and Barbara, 10, and two brothers, Ted, 15, and James, 13.

The funeral will be conducted from McCall's at 10:30 a.m. Friday.

Two Teenagers Hospitalized; Car Hits Ditch

Two teenagers were hospitalized Friday night when their car went out of control on a curve on Humpback Road and smashed into the ditch.

Robert McWhirter, 19, was scheduled to be released from St. Joseph's Hospital today. His companion, Jim Platts, 18, is reported in fairly good condition. He suffered head and hand injuries. Both are reported to live on Anderson Road.

Colwood RCMP officers said the car was wrecked when it ran off the road near railway tracks. It was headed towards Sooke Road when the accident occurred shortly before midnight.

NECK INJURIES

Mrs. Mary Slater, 42, is in fairly good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital after suffering neck injuries in a rear-end collision on the Pat Bay Highway at Glanford Friday night.

She was a passenger in a car driven by Robert Slater, 4414 Pat Bay Highway, which was turning left onto Glanford when struck from behind by an auto driven by William Perkins, 4558 Cordova Bay Rd. Damage was estimated at $1,000.

BE KIND TO TOURIST WEEK IN COURT

Magistrate Post-Dates Fine, Suspension

It was Be Kind to Tourist Week in central court this morning.

A licence suspension was post-dated by Magistrate William Ostler to permit a Manitoba visitor to drive home.

Harold Lecoy, of Portage la Prairie, pleaded guilty to impaired driving. He had failed to negotiate the turn on to Johnson Street Bridge and took out eight feet of steel guard rail.

A fine of $300 was imposed and the licence suspension ordered.

"But how will you get back?" asked Magistrate Ostler. "Does your wife drive?"

The accused admitted she could but it was clear that he wasn't happy about the idea of his wife doing the driving with three children in the car.

"And I suppose, as you're on holiday, you haven't much money left?" asked the magistrate.

This too the accused admitted.

The licence suspension will start July 1 and the fine will be paid at $50 a month starting Aug. 1.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Bottle in a Basket Solves Decor Problem

By Penny Saver

Every family with young children is faced with the problem of needing an indoor play area for the kiddies. In summer, the problem doesn't reach the crisis level, but when the fall rain starts again I know that the Savers are going to need a rumpus room desperately. Like most rumpus rooms, it is going to double as a TV area and a party room. In a room with so many functions, interior decoration becomes a great problem. We're hardly going to be able to throw a party in a room that has junior's train tracks doing loop-de-loops around the sofa and Beatlemania pictures plastered on the walls!

A room of this nature needs large, fairly portable decoration rather than small ornaments. In one store I found just what I was needing. It's called an Italian carboy—it's an enormous smoke-green bottle three feet high and approximately 2½ feet in diameter. Sitting in a giant woven basket (complete with handles), the bottom of this basket is packed with straw to support the bottle and to guard against breakage. This wide-necked bottle is perfect for large flower arrangements—mine has a tall multi-angled branch of pine standing in it. The carboy with basket is priced at $15.95.

The store where I found my carboy is a treasure-house of unusual ornaments. The design of the store itself is that of a European wine cellar. Dozens of sparkling wine bottles are suspended from the ceiling and the window display is of enormous wine vats and wooden barrels.

Another unique item I found is a wrought-iron bottle basket. This is made in a contemporary design with antiqued silver leaf ornaments. It holds one bottle and is priced at $10.95. A holder in a similar design without decoration is priced at $9.95.

A portable bar is a very useful item to have when you're throwing a party. The one I found is a three-foot-long fold-away wooden rack that will hold nine bottles. You can set this rack up anywhere, and it closes accordion style for easy storage. It is priced at $5.95.

If you'd like to know where I found these items please give me a call at 382-3131.

Fine furniture for gracious living . . .

Nothing like being away for a while to appreciate what we have here in Victoria! . . . The Gallery at Home Furniture contains traditional furniture as fine as any you'll find anywhere . . . in fact considerably better than most! . . . The other day they showed us some delightful corner curio cabinets just in from England . . . they're slim and compact . . . just made for that empty corner you've never known quite what to do with . . . Walnut or mahogany finish . . . with wooden shelves to hold your bibelots . . . New too are a couple of mahogany kidney-shaped desks . . . One has plain top, the other has inlaid genuine leather top with gold leaf tooling . . . very elegant! . . . There's a mahogany tambour desk with intriguing side-rolling top panels behind which are concealed a lot of little drawers and compartments . . . Two long drawers beneath the drop leaf desk . . . Something else that fascinated us is a mahogany wig stand . . . copied from those used by the be-wigged gentlemen and ladies of yore . . . You probably wouldn't want to use it for your own modern hairpiece . . . but it makes a handsome plant stand, and we rather think that's the intention! . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

Keep your cologne in the refrigerator for a refreshing pick-me-up when the temperature soars.

Round out your summer wardrobe . . .

Despite the fact that Madam and Eve have been selling summer dresses like mad during the past weeks and are now starting to think in terms of fall . . . there is still a goodly number of mighty nifty little summer frocks on hand . . . in sizes ranging from 5 to 14 or 15 . . . and $26 will buy practically any one of them! . . . A few that caught our eye . . . a Josef Ribcoff dress of navy checked linen with button-trimmed navy band running down one side, short sleeves . . . a couple of Nat Gordons . . . one cocoa and beige with diagonally slanted front . . . size 10 . . . the other a green and very pale beige, sleeveless with cowl collar . . . size 14 . . . Ribcoff's "mini-chemise" dress of light printed voile in various shades has proved tremendously popular, and there are a few of them left . . . Tailored like a shirt . . . and they're only "mini" on a tall girl . . . reasonably modest on the rest of us . . . A very Vogue-ish dress by Nat Gordon has a cross-over front . . . ocean blue and sea green used in juxtaposition . . . and mighty effective it is, too! . . . Size 8, this one . . . Some crimpknits in one or two-piece styles . . . navy, turquoise, orange . . . There's a plain bark brown crimpknit that could give you year-round service . . . Brown, you may have heard, promises to be a high fashion color for next fall . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

Pale, skin-toned nail polish looks better than bright shades on sun-tanned hands.

The Shrimp's your ticket to a carefree summer . . .

When Danny Hajnal at House of Glamour designed the Shrimp cut . . . we don't think even he realized how very popular it was going to prove to be! . . . And the beauty of it is, no two cuts are alike . . . each is designed to suit the individual and her type of hair . . . even fine hair looks vibrant and healthy with this artful cut with its longer top hair, and neckline moulded femininely into the scalp . . . So care-free and easy to look after . . . Come in from the wind or out of the pool and a flip of a brush is all you need! . . . We should add that the "Shrimp" is not confined to the young, but is adaptable to all ages . . . And all the stylists at House of Glamor are skilled at executing it . . . so if you'd like to banish hair problems this summer, get your own custom-designed variation of the Shrimp at H of G . . . This is a time of year when you could benefit from a few hair conditioning treatments too . . . Heat, salt water, etc., play havoc with hair . . . and even a single treatment could make a world of difference to your crowning glory . . . The H of G people know just what kind of conditioning treatment your hair needs, so make an appointment before too much havoc is wrought . . . If you're lucky you might pick up a wig or hairpiece at reduced prices . . . H of G have a few limited colors left from their sale . . . House of Glamour, 658 View St., 386-6188.

Gold, says Vogue, is replacing silver highlights in makeup.

Pretty, pretty chill-chasers . . .

One thing every woman needs come summertime is a pretty sweater to wear with her light sheaths and summery frocks when the temperature is less than sizzling . . . and this week at Wilson's we saw just the thing . . . white pure wool sweaters from England . . . hand knitted complete to the buttons . . . Two of the styles are sprinkled with embroidered flowers in pastel shades . . . dainty rosebuds or tulips . . . the third style is an all-white cable pattern . . . $29.50 and $27.50 respectively . . . These are very unique sweaters and we think they're an awful lot of value for the money . . . There's a new shipment of those lovely West German printed sweaters in too . . . completely new patterns and colors . . . and we tell you from experience they're worth their weight in gold! Perfect any season of the year . . . to wear now with your summer things . . . later on with slims for your leisure hours . . . We noticed some smart linen suits . . . a navy and white plaid with sleeveless navy shell, size 14 . . . A size 16 in navy linen with white shell spiralled with a red and navy band . . . open jacket and slim skirt . . . and a beautiful pale blue silk and wool knit dress with jacket . . . this one a size 18, and marvellous for summer travelling . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

For fun under the sun . . . shorter, curlier hair.

Learn to dance well for holiday fun . . .

We heard the other day about an older couple who recently took up residence in Victoria . . . The first time they dined out at one of the many spots that have dinner dancing . . . they discovered they'd "forgotten" how to dance . . . so off they went to Arthur Murray's to refresh their memories and learn some modern steps . . . At last report they were having themselves a ball . . . and enjoying their dining-out evenings as never before! . . . How about you? Are you a "minus" on the dance floor this summer? . . . Holiday fun actually begins on the dance floor. To dance well, with confidence, is the surest way we know of projecting yourself into new fun . . . making new friends . . . and this is true regardless of your age! . . . So if you've got yourself into a rut . . . are sitting out too many dances . . . call the Arthur Murray School of Dancing and learn how quickly they can teach you, and at what moderate cost . . . (Don't let the word "School" fool you . . . they're open all summer long from noon to 10 p.m. weekdays except Saturday, when the curfew is 5 o'clock) . . . Right now Murray's are offering a $50 course of dancing for just $10 . . . and if you act fast you'll be dancing beautifuly in time for your holidays! . . . Arthur Murray School of Dancing, 715 Yates St., 385-1476.

Handsome, inexpensive glassware for summer entertaining . . .

We all have our own ideas about what's needed for a good party . . . but one thing we do agree upon is the need for glasses . . . and plenty of them . . . Hopefully, good-looking ones . . . and preferably the kind whose accidental breakage is not a major calamity . . . Montague Bridgman's have just received a new shipment of Regency glassware by Colony . . . (it's been on order from the U.S. since February, so you see it's not too easy to come by) . . . which is the answer to a hostess' prayer when it comes to party glasses . . . or glasses for day-in-day-out use . . . Many of you already own some of this glassware and need to replenish your supply . . . And if you don't, our recommendation is get some now while the stock is good . . . This glassware is very plain and elegant, and looks for all the world as though it were hand cut . . . yet it's sturdy and inexpensive . . . Glasses literally sparkle . . . have good solid bases and are almost as thin as crystal . . . If you hold them up to the light you'll see they're crystal clear too . . . They come in sets of 8 . . . Highball glasses at $4.75; table tumblers are $4.50, and juice and cocktail glasses, $4.25 . . . Big salad bowl with servers is $6.50, and ice tubs with tongs should be on hand by the time you read this . . . Exclusive to . . . Montague Bridgman Limited, 811 Government St., 383-0821.

This weekend will be a particularly happy one for visitors Mr. and Mrs. Albrecht Wormer, for it will mark their second wedding anniversary. They'll have two days to celebrate, Sunday being the anniversary of their civil ceremony in the City Hall (required by German law) and Monday, the day of their church wedding service. Visiting German Couple Recall Beginning of Romance

IT STARTED WITH A HAIRCUT

By PAT DUFOUR

When 22-year-old Karin Wormer first met her husband she cut his hair . . . and he obviously enjoyed every snip of it.

Sound like an unusual beginning of a courtship? Not if you live in Germany, says Mrs. Albrecht Wormer.

This vivacious visitor, who's here with her husband on a seven-week visit, is a beautician and the barbering was part of her three years' course.

"We have to do everything, men and women's hair-styling, massage, manicure and all that's needed for good grooming. In Germany, we work in small beauty shops, one side of which is for men and the other for women. I met Albrecht when I was a student six years ago. I chose him as my model because he had such good hair."

The Wormers live in the West German city of Mannheim, and this is their first trip to Canada. They're here to visit Mrs. Wormer's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Heinz Mueller, and their two children, 10-year-old Karen (named for her aunt) and Harry, who is 13.

The last time Mr. Mueller saw Karin she was seven years old. He agrees that his little sister has blossomed into a long-legged beauty.

With European flair, Karin wears clothes with the grace of a top-flight model. She reports that the miniskirt is still milady's favorite in Europe. With a delightful accent and appropriate gestures, she explains, "The skirts are way, way up . . . there's nothing 'ere or dere." She points to her breasts and her thighs.

She wears her hair in the short, razor-cut fashion that's topping the polls in Europe, edging out the Courreges style, which is long at the back, shaped around the face and named for the Parisian who created it.

The Wormers came over on a plane chartered by two groups, the German Co-operative and the Dutch Workmen's Union. Like the Wormers, most of the passengers are in Canada to visit relatives.

Both Karin and Albrecht are enthusiastic about Canada. "The people are so friendly to we Germans and much easier to get to know than our own countrymen."

Here less than a week, the Wormers are tempted to try to come back . . . for good. But Albrecht has misgivings. "I'm a purchasing agent with an engineering firm and it would be hard for me to get the same sort of job here. My English is not too good."

Both say that Germans have much more opportunity to speak English in their own country since the American troops have been stationed there and report that English is taught as a second language in high school. To a lesser degree, they can also study French, Latin and Russian.

When the Wormers leave Victoria, they'll be joined by the Muellers who will travel with them as far as Edmonton where they'll board a charter plane for home. Says Mary Mueller, "We want to show them as much as we can. We have a trailer and intend to take our time." She lists some of the places on the itinerary.

At the top of the list is the Rockies. Her eager visitors explain, "We must see them. Just like the maple leaf, to us they mean Canada."

Honor Priest At Reception

More than 200 parishioners gathered in the parish hall of Queen of Peace Church recently to honor their priest, Fr. M. J. McNamara, at a reception. The occasion marked the 25th anniversary of his ordination.

Using an Irish motif, the hall was decorated in silver and green. A Gaelic inscription was put on the large cake at the head table. White flowers and silver candelabra completed the table decor.

J. J. Comerford was master of ceremonies, introducing F. Blackley, president of the Men's Club, and Mrs. M. Kokran, president of the Catholic Women's League, who made a presentation of a wallet of money to the honor guest.

Russell Revoy presented Fr. McNamara with a gift from the altar boys. Fr. McNamara spoke briefly, thanking all those taking part.

Mrs. J. Pryke was in charge of the refreshments which were served buffet-style.

Visiting clergy at the reception were Msgr. A. J. Baker of Mount St. Mary, Fr. M. Costello, Fr. W. J. O'Brien of Langford and Fr. L. McLellan, former pastor of the church.

Completing the evening, Fr. O'Brien introduced Fr. McLellan, who made a presentation from the clergy and recalled memories of his own 25th anniversary, held in the same hall in 1945. His 40th anniversary was celebrated there in 1960.

For Couple Married at Royal Oak Today

PRINCE RUPERT NEW HOME

Following their marriage this afternoon, newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Derek Geoffrey Sidenius are travelling to Prince Rupert, where they will make their home. The bride, the former Patricia Margaret Page, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley B. Page, 4055 Zinnia Street, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Harriet Sidenius, Vancouver, and the late Major Geoffrey Sidenius.

Embroidered satin daisies starred the floor-length gown of corded silk worn by the bride. Sleeves ended in lily points and the full skirt, styled on classical lines, swept back into a cathedral train. The only jewelry accent to the gown was pearl earrings, gift of the groom. Her veil of silk illusion net misted the length of the train from a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis, with trailing ivy.

Baskets of white gladioli and pew markers of white and apricot ribbon roses decorated St. Michael and All Angels Church for the service conducted by Rev. W. Greenhalgh. Organist was Mrs. R. Cleland. Mr. Page gave his daughter in marriage.

Matron of honor Mrs. R. E. Walker, Terrace, and bridesmatron Mrs. W. Spyksma were gowned alike in apricot wild silk. Styled on princess lines, the floor-length gowns featured edgings of nylon ruffles, with trains held at the waist by fabric roses. Their headpieces were fashioned of apricot silk roses and they carried bouquets of talisman roses and stephanotis in yellow and orange, with trailing ivy.

David Baxter, Calgary, was best man, and ushers were John Mitchell, Vancouver, Charles La Vertue, Penticton, and Patrick Settle.

A four-tier wedding cake topped with wedding bells and flanked with silver candelabra centred the head table at the reception in the Crystal Room of the Executive House. Floral arrangements of roses and carnations and baskets of gladioli completed the decor. Keith Dinsdale proposed the toast.

A two-piece dress and coat ensemble in mushroom shade silk, topped with a multi-colored floral hat was the choice of the bride for travelling. Brown accessories complemented the outfit.

Actors Raise $80 at Tea

A total of $80 was realized when the Bastion Theatre Actors' Committee held a scholarship tea in the Midland Road home of Mrs. Robert Price. The proceeds are earmarked for two scholarships to enable students to attend the 1967-68 session of Bastion Theatre School.

Highlights of the tea, convened by Mrs. Harvey Waldner, were the "Eighteen-Seventies" and "Roaring Twenties" rooms, which were decorated with displays of old props, costumes and threatre programs.

Guest of honor was well-known vocalist and actress Miss Eva Hart. Presiding at the refreshment tables were Mrs. Robert Baird, Mrs. Alan Chapple, Mrs. Charles E. Morriss and Mrs. Bill McBean.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Readers Comment On Religion

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You really opened your big mouth and stuck both feet in it when you advised the wife of the man who was brought up in the Catholic church, and got fed up with it, to send her husband to a head-shrinker. Religion is so much superstition and hokum which, in itself, is a form of a "mental disease."

Those who believe that a cracker, which comes out of a bakery like any other cracker, becomes the "flesh of God" when they eat it, are sick, not those who don't believe it. I could go on pointing out the absurdities of religion, but I doubt that it would do any good as most religionists are so completely brainwashed they can't think straight when it come to religion.

Religion serves a good purpose for people who need a crutch. But when they no longer need it, they are well, not sick. I always thought you were half nuts. Now I'm sure of it.

NOT SUPERSTITIOUS

DEAR ABBY: You religious believers can make all sorts of remarks about us nonbelievers in the public press, but the opinion of the nonbeliever is never expressed without censorship or distortion.

If there is truly freedom of religion, and freedom of the press, then a person has as much right not to believe as one has to believe. And the nonbeliever's opinions should be printed alongside the believers'.

This is one letter that will never make your column, but I had to write it.

ANTI-RELIGIONIST

DEAR ABBY: Just because a man has suddenly found out that religion is one of the biggest rackets going on, you say he's a mental case.

And what do you base your opinion on? A poor guy got tired of putting food on the table and hearing his wife and kids thank "God" for it.

I once knew a man who never rose from the table without thanking his wife for the meal. Would you send him to the head doctor, too?

NONBELIEVER

DEAR ABBY: So now you are a psychiatric diagnostician yet! I refer to the man who suddenly got this "thing" about religion, as his wife put it, because he refused to go to church, ridiculed her and the children when they did, wouldn't let the priest in the house, and when his wife said grace at the table demanded, "Don't thank God for the food—thank ME!"

With no more than that to go on, you say the man has a symptom of mental illness and ought to see a doctor. E.S.P. maybe you have, Abby?

This man would find many a kindred spirit in a Unitarian church where there are many well-balanced, sane, educated people who formerly belonged to an orthodox church, but developed a "thing" about what they were taught there.

Dainty Chantilly Lace Enhances Bridal Gown

A wide band of peau de soie emphasized the empire waistline of the gown worn by Brenda Joan Ward this morning when she became the bride of Frank Charles Basham.

The gown, fashioned of delicate Chantilly lace over taffeta, featured an A-line flare to the skirt. Seed pearls outlined the bateau neckline and sleeves ended in lily points. Her veil misted to chapel-length from a floral headpiece and she carried a prayer book, topped with stephanotis and streamers. As "something old," she wore a gold cross, belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. E. Bithell.

Arrangements of carnations in white and gold tones, Esther Reed daisies and snapdragons decorated St. Peter's Anglican Church for the service uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald F. Ward, 3834 Quadra Street, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip C. Basham, 1808 San Pedro Avenue. Dr. Kenneth M. King officiated at the service, assisted by Rev. Ernest W. S. Gilbert. Mr. Ward gave his daughter in marriage.

During the service, Gary Dillabaugh sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Whither Thou Goest," accompanied by organist Mrs. K. M. King.

Maid of honor Miss Gwen Walker was in an A-line gown of pale blue sheer over green taffeta. Similar outfits in floral turquoise and mauve chiffon over mauve taffeta were worn by bridesmaids, the Misses Michaele Prior and the bride's sister Susan Ward, and junior bridesmaid Wendy Basham, sister of the groom. Their cascade bouquets of yellow marguerites were accented with pearl leaves, echoing their tiaras.

Douglas Strongitharm was best man and ushering the guests were Robert Wedd and brothers of the principals, Alan Basham and David Ward. Ringbearers were Paul Ward and Daniel Basham.

M. Palmer proposed the toast to the bride at the reception following in Holyrood House.

For travelling on honeymoon to the lower mainland, the new Mrs. Basham donned a three-piece suit of turquoise linen, which she accented with a matching hat and white accessories. Johanna Hill roses and stephanotis formed her corsage.

Paris Downs the Hemline

PARIS (AP)—Hemlines are coming down in the new Paris collections for fall and winter. About an inch below the knee seems to be the consensus.

"Mine will be longer," says Carven. "Why freeze in winter?"

"Hemlines can't get any shorter," says Se Rauch. "I'm dropping them."

Coco Chanel, who once got herself in trouble with the young swingers with a blast at mini-skirts, says: "I'm against ugliness. I always think of the once-over a man gives a woman.

"Elegance is harmony."

The collections will be shown next month. The Paris houses that went a couple of inches above the knee seem determined to reverse the trend. Dior made a tentative move in this direction last year by lengthening coats.

Michael Goma of Jean Patou is sponsoring "a comfortable length with occasional dives to calf length."

Guy Laroche thinks "the time has come to search for better proportions." He feels, however, "calf length is incompatible with contemporary living."

But nothing has changed for Ted Lapidus, the most offbeat of all Paris couturiers. He sticks to his guns and says "both mothers and daughters will show kneecaps in a variety of mini-lengths."

Other than the hemlines, the prospect for the new season is a veering away from the Twiggy look and the masculine silhouette and back to the feminine girls. Clothes will be cut to show the figure. Waists will be cinched and always belted, necklines flattering and sleeves everywhere.

STRANGE CUSTOMS

On Fleeing The Red Tape At Port Stop

By JOHN MANNING

Former Victoria Times reporter John Manning and his wife Pat are currently on a 12,000-mile "Centennial Cruise" aboard their tiny sailing ship Powindah. The pair started in England and hope to end their cruise in the Inner Harbor. This is the 31st in a series on their adventures.

If the world's yachtsmen were granted a chance to establish their own valhalla it is certain that the Puerto Azul Yacht Club would come very close to matching their visions of paradise.

Within its high-fenced grounds this $25 million club has three different swimming pools, a movie theatre, de luxe apartment blocks, a bowling alley, restaurant, cafeteria, numerous bars and a spacious playground for children.

The yacht basin is deep enough and the breakwater large enough to shelter a full blown battleship from a hurricane. Hurricanes, however, have yet to disturb this region's year round sailing.

Atlantic-worn and showing signs of two months almost continual sailing in the West Indies, Powindah arrived there and was welcomed as royally as ever the Queen of Sheba was on entering Cairo.

The fact that three feet of the boat's starboard handrail was festooned with drying fish or that her ancient rig looked better placed in a Caracas museum did little to deter the club populace.

Reputation

Venezuela's reputation amongst foreign yachtsmen is so forbidding that they have come to regard its coastline and territorial waters as taboo. In past years there may have been just cause for this.

Boats have been impounded and their owners left to ruminate in jail. However, in recent times there has been a great yachting boom in Venezuela and a number of ultra-modern marinas and private clubs have been built.

Within minutes of these harbors exists some of the best deepsea fishing in the world. For sailing craft one could hardly ask for better conditions. Because of this increased boating activity the Venezuelan Navy now takes a more temperate view of overseas voyageurs. However, Powindah was one of the few cruising vessels that had put into Puerto Azul in some months and as a result we were thoroughly spoiled.

Three Days

For three days we stayed at a friend's home in Caracas, the capital of Venezuela.

There, the Canadian Ambassador Mr. Bruce Rankin, honored Powindah's crew with a cocktail party; we were taken under the 'wing' of the aristocrat who had planned and financed the building of Puerto Azul, Doctor Daniel Camejo, and were wined and dined by various members of Venezuela's sailing fraternity.

Some two hundred people, from all walks of life, came aboard Powindah during her 10-day stay in port; among them was the present ambassador to the United Nations.

It was after this gentleman went ashore that Pat said, "I think it's time we were putting to sea. If you hear one more person compliment you about Powindah and where she's been you'll be so puffed up you won't be able to get out the hatch."

Foreign Port

Accordingly, the next morning we journeyed the 12 miles into La Guaira city in order to obtain clearance allowing us to sail for a foreign port. A boy was assigned to guide us to the right officials by the Harbor Master. The boy's name was Manuel.

Some day he will become president of Venezuela for at the age of 10 he has already more savoir faire and diplomacy than most men do at 60. First he led us to the third storey office of a little man who resembled a cross between Adolf Hitler and Tojo. We nicknamed him Weevil Head.

"I'm so glad you have come to see me; sit down, sit down." He slapped dust off two chairs. The telephone rang: he ignored it for a moment then barked an order at his secretary. "Cancel all calls, cancel them."

"You wish clearance, no?" His spider-like appendages reached out and clasped our passports. He sat down behind his desk and began to examine each page of each passport with a magnifying glass.

"Senor," I said, "they are authentic."

"Perhaps. One must always be sure."

Much Paper

I glanced at Manuel. He shrugged his shoulders. The three of us sat down and waited. Save for two desks and three chairs the room was utterly bare and gave one the impression that it had been rented for this occasion. Weevil Head snapped the passports shut.

"We will need much paper. At least one new pad."

The girl was sent out and another half hour passed. When she returned Weevil Head began typing forms, with no less than six carbons to each one. I began to wonder if he was preparing a court case.

"Now," he said, on finishing the last form. "You will have to go first to the Customs, then to Immigration, then to Police Headquarters and finally to Army headquarters. Then return here."

"Are you certain that all these people wish to be involved in clearing our boat?"

"Positive."

With the ever-smiling, ever-patient Manuel as a guide we set off to the various offices and for the next two hours revolved in a perfect world of bureaucracy and red tape. Were it not for the assistance of young Manuel we should still be there, fumbling our way through dark corridors of officialdom and rubber stamps.

Great Sheaf

Finally, at 10 minutes to 12, and clutching a great sheaf of signed and stamped papers we arrived back in Weevil Head's office. By now these papers were more precious to us than the most priceless Van Gogh.

"It's all done," I said triumphantly. "All stamped and signed just as you wanted. Now if you don't mind we would like to be on our way. We are sailing in two hours."

"I'm terribly sorry about that," purred Weevil Head. "I see from these papers that you failed to get the signature of the Naval Commandant. . . ."

A phone call was made to the Yacht Club and after listening slack-jawed to the telephone for three minutes Weevil Head came to the conclusion that the papers were in order. We learned later something I should have suspected all along: that he was holding out for a bribe. Instead, it was Manuel who went home with increased funds.

In spite of this incident we sailed from Venezuela with sad hearts, well realizing that we might never touch its beautiful shores again or see the many people who had befriended us.

QUICK SNACK for two is prepared by Pat Manning as she and husband John sail out to sea once more in their sailboat the Powindah. Story of their stopover in Venezuela is at left.

Air Cargo Centre Highly Automated

Copenhagen's highly automated air cargo centre — first of its kind in Europe — was opened recently by Svend Horn, Danish Minister of Communications.

The new facility triples the capacity of Scandinavian Airlines' main European gateway. It has been constructed in cooperation between the Danish Civil Aviation Authority, SAS and Dortech, Inc., of Stamford, Connecticut.

The daily capacity of the new terminal amounts to a maximum of 600 tons and the total area covered is 80,000 square feet.

All goods converge via conveyor belts at a sorter with a capacity of 3,000 pieces an hour. Twenty-six piers branch off from the sorter conveyor and carts are loaded at the end of these piers.

There are 842 such tow carts with a total capacity of 60,000 cubic feet. The loaded carts are pushed over to an endless towline loop and a coding pin on each cart activates the switches en route and guide it to import area, pallet area or stacker.

842 BINS

The stacker is a seven-storey steel structure with 842 bins, one for each cart. It is divided into three sections, each with a centre aisle. Three automatic cranes traveling the length of the aisles automatically pick up the carts and position them according to serial number. On an impulse by remote control from the stacker operator, the cranes extract the carts from the stacker and deposit them on the towline.

According to their pin setting, the carts proceed to the import area, to ramp vehicles for goods transfer to passenger aircraft, or to the pallet area for all cargo aircraft.

Pallets are built up on three hydraulic lifts and after completion hoisted to a bridge and picked up by an automatic pallet transfer vehicle. This in turn carries the pallets to designated bins in a two-storey rack with room for 31 pallets.

When the aircraft is ready for loading, pallets pass through one of three docks and are conveyed to mechanized loaders which take them to palletized aircraft. There are ten parking positions in front of the air cargo centre, including three for DC-8F jet traders.

Climbing School

Of all the nature's challenges, mountain climbing continues to capture the enthusiasm of more people each year. Once the mighty Matterhorn of Switzerland was unconquerable, today it is climbed routinely. To accommodate the many people who want to participate in this exhilirating sport, there are mountaineering schools throughout Switzerland.

VOICE FROM THE GALLERY

Crafts Display 'Impressive'

By TONY EMERY

Reaching for the last frayed threads of what was never more than a tattered rag of a classical education, I recall the Greeks made no differentiation between art and craft: the word "techne" served them for both.

Emery

In their terms the poet and the potter, the musician and the mason, the weaver and the sculptor and the jeweller were all "technicians."

The Middle Ages, with their guilds and their apprenticeship systems, perpetuated this idea and it is really only since the Renaissance that the modern notion of "The Fine Arts" has taken root.

Largely because of the propaganda of people like Leonardo and the friendship of great artists like Titian and Michelangelo and Durer with popes, archdukes and emperors the social status and prestige of painters and sculptors rose rapidly, while masons and jewellers, potters and weavers stayed where they were among the horny-handed sons and daughters of toil.

Two different circumstances converge today to undermine this concept of the arty artist as vastly superior to the crafty craftsman.

One is the notion now widely prevalent among the younger artists that art—and especially Fine Art—is so definitely dead that there is no point in even running a tracer through Argentina; and the other is the great revival of interest in crafts like weaving and pottery and jewellery to the point where they have been warmly embraced by scores of people with no feelings of social inferiority, to put it mildly.

So a new craft snobbery has made its appearance, and we have to face the concept of The Fine Crafts, i.e. weaving, pottery, jewellery, etc., as opposed, presumably, to the coarse crafts like welding and the strange rites performed by the sagger-maker's bottom-knocker in darkest Staffordshire, among other magic places.

Because the Industrial Revolution nailed down the coffin of the traditional craftsman, it is only in Eastern Canada that there has been a long native tradition.

In Western Canada the crafts have been in existence only as a result of the craft revival of which I spoke earlier. All this leads up—at last—to the Canadian Fine Crafts show now installed in the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

The show was the brainchild of Norah McCullough, regional liaison officer for the National Gallery, and it is the National Gallery that has organized and circulated the exhibition.

Of the more than 350 objects displayed in the vitrines (and I must say here that although this method of display may assist the smaller galleries in Canada it is a handicap to our own gallery which could easily have shown the objects to much better advantage if given a free hand in the arrangement) I found the pottery on the whole the most impressive.

In view of the relative infancy of the crafts on the coast it was particulary gratifying to see how many B.C. names figured in the catalogue: Osborne, Grove, Nehl-Maclennan, Schwenk, Cavelti, Hardman, Henry, Irving, Huyghe, Glenn Lewis and Laffin were some of them.

The majority of the objects are for sale, and the well-produced catalogue will give you details of how to go about buying. But even if you aren't in the market for a pot or a place-mat you should see this show in order to get some idea of the very healthy state of the crafts across Canada.

When I said that the crafts in Western Canada had to wait the arrival of the Affluent Society I was not really forgetting the existence of the indigenous craftsman-artist among the Coast Indians.

I wanted to save mention of them until the end in order to put in a plug for the Vancouver Art Gallery. Indian crafts are rather poorly represented in the National Gallery show. To see them at their best you owe yourself a visit to Vancouver sometime between now and Sept. 24 in order to take in the "Arts of the Raven" exhibition in the Art Gallery there.

This is by far the most carefully-selected, brilliantly-instaled show of Indian art ever put on anywhere, and if you miss it you may never get a comparable opportunity to see the Indian craftsman at his best.

The "Canadian Fine Crafts" show in our own gallery comes off on July 9, so get down to see it before then.

'Woolf' Girl Prefers Broadway

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Sandy Dennis has an Oscar and a commitment for 11 new movies, so you know what she's doing? Running right back to Broadway.

Sandy is unique in her infatuation with the stage. Most actresses who make it big in movies stay as far away from the theatre as they can get. They dread the long hours, the small pay and doing the same role night after night for months on end.

Kim Stanley, Geraldine Page, Julie Harris and other fine actresses spend most of their careers on stage because they never became major box-office stars in movies. Their options are few.

But blonde, jittery Sandy is in a fair way of becoming a full-fledged movie star. She has already completed three pictures since her Oscar-winning performance in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" — "Up the Down Stairs Case," "The Fox" and her current "Sweet November" at Warner Bros.

Whether it's insecurity or an overwhelming love for the theatre is speculative.

"I'd do plays all the time if I could get away with it," Sandy said during a break at the studio. "But there really aren't that many good plays around. If there were, more actors would be doing them."

TAKE ANOTHER LOOK

Do You Really Know B.C.?

By JOHN MIKA

It takes a schedule to keep track of major new tourist attractions opening their doors in British Columbia these days with the blessings of cabinet ministers.

Today Premier Bennett officially opens Fort Steele, a government restoration project somewhat similar to Barkerville but located in the Kootenay valley.

Earlier this week, Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan opened a big game farm just outside of Vernon where tourists will be able to photograph 75 African and American animals in field and woods.

Last week Premier Bennett did the honors for the O'Keefe ranch in the Okanagan Valley.

And last month Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi reopened an oldtime church in the frontier mountain town restoration known as Three Valley Gap 12 miles west of Revelstoke.

A group of Canadian and American travel writers recently went more than 1,000 miles on one of Vancouver Island Coach Lines modern and thoroughly-comfortable coaches up the Nicola Valley, across the Shuswap Valley down the Okanagan Valley and back the Similkameen and Fraser Valleys.

Big Game Trophies On The Hoof

They enjoyed the beautiful scenery, tested some of the fishing in the innumerable lakes along the route, squinted at the big game trophies on the hoof along the jagged skyline and studies some of the slopes that provide excellent skiing in winter.

But these are familiar sights and old stories for British Columbians.

The writers, who hailed from all parts of the continent, were equally impressed with the variety and tone of some of the man-made "tourist attractions" available in what they still considered a virgin wilderness and some British Columbians who cross borders to enjoy similar holiday hits might find a B.C. tour an eye-opening experience too.

Take Three Valley Gap, for instance. It's a private resort set in the shadows of breathtakingly beautiful waterfalls coursing 1,000 feet down sheer rocks to the floor of Eagle Pass.

Developed by Revelstoke resident Gordon Bell, it's something like a cross between Knott's Berry Farm in California and Barkerville in the Cariboo.

A stay of several relaxing days could be spent at this delightful waterhole for the whole family whether it was touring by car or coach.

Besides the usual modern motel, sandy private beach and excellent lake for swimming, boating or fishing, dining room, souvenir shop and children's playground, Mr. Bell offers:

Homesteaders, Trapper's Cabin

Rides on a genuine mining train from Nordegg, Alta., around the grounds he built to display a decade of enthusiastic collecting of pioneer antiques from B.C., Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Costumed mannequins — some lifelike and others alive — perform appropriate tasks in resurrected log school, homestead log house, trapper cabin, square-timbered barn, 1880 jail and sheriff's office and the church which was built at Donald, B.C., in 1886, was moved to Field in 1902 and was reopened at Eagle Pass this year complete with a working set of pine organ pipes.

The whole village is a museum of machines, furniture and appliances used by pioneers, but the saloon is anything but a static display.

A replica of the one that took the money of the miners in the Big Bend gold rush of 1866, it's in business as a funtime centre for the tourist rush of a century later.

Drinks pour from its taps and Can-Can girls squeal and kick on its barroom stage in two floor shows a day, seven days a week.

Everyone Can Belly-Up To Bar

But the drinks are rootbeer and soft cider and the bottoms-up hoofers on stage are the cute Bell daughters Lorrane, 5, Melody 6 and Carol 11 — so the whole family can "belly-up to the bar" and take in the show.

In the Okanagan, the tourist's eye will be caught by the O'Keefe Ranch which began 100 years ago this month and is still a "working spread" eight miles from downtown Vernon.

But owners Mr. and Mrs. Tierney O'Keefe found so many travellers would stop spontaneously to view the original Catholic church, general store and blacksmith shop that served the whole district and still stand beside the homestead mansion that they found themselves amateur tourist operators.

Deciding to become professionals, they hauled out all the old blacksmith tools, family heirlooms and unsold store stock still on hand, scoured the countryside for more authentic items and put them all on display in the well-preserved buildings.

Straight-From-The-Past Wares

One step inside the general store and a visitor is whisked back a whole era to marvel at hand-operated (pump, that is) vacuum cleaners, dry goods of a hundred kinds, old-fashioned candies, aromatic tobacco leaves hanging from the ceiling and a host of other genuine straight-from-the-past merchandise items cramming counters floor and walls.

The blacksmith shop, too, is filled with interesting relics of a bygone time as is the gracious mansions, sumptuous enough to attract the Marquis of Lorne to stay two nights during a hunting trip he took in 1882 while governor-general of Canada.

Besides the displays, there's also a store on the grounds where the same old-fashioned candies, refreshments, souvenirs and antique Canadiana are for sale as well as admiration.

Any trip down the Okanagan Valley in summer is bound to produce a tan at the numerous inviting sun-baked sandy beaches but there's more than swimming to attract you there in August.

Swingers, western-style, find an irresistible lure in Penticton during its famous Peach Festival Aug. 2-6 which features a rip-snortin' rodeo among its daily attractions.

Back-to-back with it is the biggest "do si do" of them all when the whole town becomes the Square-Dance Capital of North America.

Do-Si-Doers Swell Population

It's normal 16,000 population swells to more than 23,000 for the annual B.C. Square Dance Jamboree which will be held for the 14th time this year from Aug. 7 to 12. More than 3,000 square dance enthusiasts, from virtually every province and most states, will promenade—hundreds of them at the same time—on a special dance platform built for the occasion.

To illustrate the town's tourist drawing power: two decades ago it had two hotels and two auto courts; today it has four hotels, 70 motels, 30 campgrounds and a million-dollar convention centre that will accommodate 2,000 at a meal sitting.

If the Penticton whoop-dee-do hasn't sated your appetite for frantic frolics, you can move on a few miles to Kelowna, where everyone wears a Bennett-smile and yachting cap for the Kelowna Regatta during the second week of August and you can see top Canadian and American swimmers, divers and boat racers in action by day and colorful water ballets by night.

All the delights of a big-city seaport are available in Vancouver for the homeward-bound Victorian who may still have some energy and fun money left.

Sky Ride Will Thrill All

A trip up the new Sky Ride to the swank chalet atop Grouse Mountain will thrill the youngsters, give Dad a bar stool to hang onto and Mom a view of the Olympic Mountains from an entirely new angle—above (or so it seems)—while she gazes through the panoramic windows of the dining room.

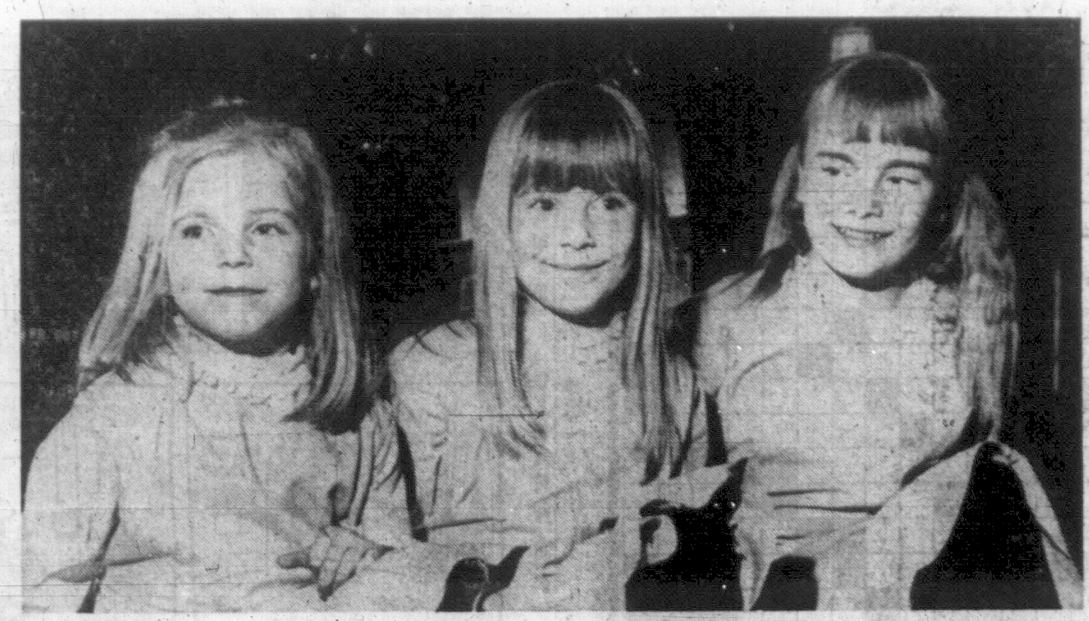
For more kicks, a visit to the Marco Polo nightclub downtown will unveil a high-calibre cabaret show and what must be one of the oddest regular acts in any nightclub—would you believe a Chinese champion yo-yo player? Go and believe for yourself.

But the best family attraction is closest of all to home—just one mile north of Duncan and it's well worth a special trip if the sunny Okanagan is too far this summer.

It's the Forest Museum of Cowichan Valley.

Open from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. seven days a week until the end of September, it drew 27,000 visitors in its second full season last year and there are bound to be many more this year.

The biggest attraction is a mile-long ride, through woods and over a lake cove trestle bridge, on a real tootin' steam locomotive train, narrow-gauge size.



SPRIGHTLY dance hall girls (from left): Lorrane, 5; Melody, 6, and Carol, 11, take a breather on the Golden Wheel Saloon's bar between can-can numbers for tourists who visit their father Gordon Bell's antique-filled frontier mountain town attraction at Three Valley Gap near Revelstoke. They sing sweetly too.

NEVER A GONDOLIER SOLO WITH 'ACOUSTIC SOUND'

VENICE (CP) — You don't have to be able to carry a tune to work as a gondolier in this Italian city of canals nowadays. Few ever get a chance to solo anymore.

"The gondolier used to sing just for his sweetheart," says Giorgio Valentini, a tourist official who is a grandson of a gondolier.

"Now there is a nightly gondola serenade — an hour's tour on the Grand Canal through a crowd of 50 or 60 gondolas. It's very effective. You get an acoustic sound."

The tour costs 1,500 lire a person — about $2.60 in Canadian money — and it's about the closest thing to the Venice of the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, The Gondoliers.

There are exceptions, of course, especially if you happen to be a visiting princess or perhaps even a foreign travel writer.

When a group of 10 Canadian journalists stopped off in Venice, officials gave them the VIP treatment by hauling out four gold-bedecked gondolas once used by the Queen Mother and Princess Elizabeth.

Rare, Exotic Coral Mined in Hawaii

Hawaiian waters are being "mined" for rare and exotic coral which will give milady an opportunity to wear the jewels once preferred by the women of the Egyptian Pharaons.

Centuries ago the Romans and the Rajas were so entranced by coral the Mediterranean coral beds were almost depleted.

Now great beds of exotic coral in several colors have been found in Hawaiian waters. Off the Island of Maui divers have been fetching to the surface branch-like pieces of black coral for several years. This, when brought to the surface, is actually a dark-reddish color. It takes about a year before it is thoroughly dried out and has become brittle enough to break into pieces which may later be carved into jewelry.

Black coral has become as popular with men as with women. Large stones have been set in heavy gold and silver rings which have a definite masculine appeal.

Earrings, bracelets and pins of broken pieces and necklaces are being designed from the smaller pieces. These are stark-black and make stunning accent accessories. Some deisgners have softened their pieces with pearls which gives a more feminine appearance.

More recently, two University of Hawaii scientists discovered the rare red coral which had been so preferred in the olden days. This was found far down in the treacherous Molokai Chanel, a feared depth of water that lies between the Islands of Oahu and Molokai.

THE SEA IS MISSING; SEARCH THE MOUNTAINS

"Only the sea is missing!"

That's what the Czechoslovaks say when they list the natural tourist attractions of their country. And it's a fact. In this land-locked nation of central Europe you can find just about everything the tourist seeks—except the sea.

Which may explain in part why Czechoslovaks are such mountain lovers. The country, of course, is well-blessed with mountains, boasting many ranges although it is only the size of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick put together.

MEMORY GAME

Arrange ten playing cards, alternating black and red, in a row on the table. Then permit all participants in this memory test to gaze simultaneously for two minutes upon the row of cards. At the end of this period turn the ten cards face downward and request the players to make a list of the cards, following the order in which they were placed in the row.

Each player scores one point for each card he correctly names both as to denomination and order. Highest score wins.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

A rather neglected field of philately — at least on this continent, is the collecting of British stamps used abroad.

One of the main reasons for this lack of interest is undoubtedly the fact that they are not listed in American catalogues, Gibbons of London publishing the only reference work that covers these issues.

Starting in 1857 many of the remoter and less developed colonies that were not considered sufficiently advanced to warrent having their own stamps, were supplied with a stock of the then current stamps of Great Britain.

Each post office also received a special obliterator, generally in the form of a numeral framed within an oval of bars, similar to the cancellers then in use in England. It is by the special numerals allotted to these overseas post offices that it is now possible to identify stamps as having been used in a certain colony rather than in Great Britain.

Quite a number of British stamps with similar obliterators were issued to British consulates in foreign countries also, especially in parts of the world where postal facilities were primitive and unreliable, as in South America.

In these cases the Consul would include any letters entrusted in his care (provided they were franked with British stamps) in his consular mail bag, which pretty well guaranteed efficient and reliable handling.

Altogether there were about 80 different post offices throughout the world that used British stamps between the years 1857 and 1880.

Some, indeed, continued to use them well into the 20th century. Gibbons lists over 1600 different stamps in the "used abroad" section, but his is only a basic list, for it does not take into account the different plate numbers on each stamp, which should be included to make a collection complete.

If these were added it is possible that it would take 7,500 different stamps to show all possible combinations of Great Britain "used abroad"! It can be safely stated that no one has ever achieved this goal.

The fact that letters from the colony of Vancouver Island had all to be routed via San Francisco, and through the U.S. postal service, made it necessary for Victorians to use American stamps, which were on sale at the local P.O. before we got our own stamps. U.S. stamps, thus "used abroad," and bearing a Victoria postmark, are quite valuable.

MAGIC YOU CAN DO

Perhaps it's a bit underhanded, but here is a good stunt to enhance one's reputation as an effective magician:

A coin is shown to the audience and the performer, holding it in his right hand, throws a handkerchief over it. Individual spectators are then asked to put their hands beneath the handkerchief and feel the coin.

All will agree, of course, that the coin is there, but when the performer removes the handkerchief, the coin has vanished.

How it's done: A friend is needed to act as a confederate. He is the last person among the group to put his hand beneath the handkerchief. As he does so, he picks up the coin and removes it, hidden between his thumb and fingers.

The effect is very startling.

8 CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our deep gratitude to the many friends of the late Mr. Duncan McLaughlin Peat. Also for the beautiful floral tributes extended during his sickness and death. For the compassion shown by Dr. Mellor, Britannia Branch No. 7 and McCalls Funeral Chapel. Also 3rd floor staff of Mount St. Mary's Hosp. Rev. J. A. Roberts for his consoling sermon. — Mrs. M. P Cook and family

I wish to thank sincerely the Policemen and Miss Spareshoot at Victoria Airport, for the assistance given my husband stricken there, May 18. Special thanks also to Sidney Ambulance, Dr. P. B. Walsh and staff at Resthaven Hospital. Due to your combined efforts he is now progressing very satisfactory. — Mrs. R. N. Weston.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for messages of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings received from our many friends and relatives in the sudden passing of our dear wife and mother. — John Foubister, Ina V., Verna S., Vivian E., and Stanley R.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DIXON — In loving memory of my dear husband (Isaiah), who passed away June 24th, 1966.

Time speeds on, one year has passed,
Since death its gloom, its shadows cast.
Within our home, when all seemed bright,
And took from us a shining light.
His vacant place there is none to fill,
Down here we mourn but not in vain,
For up in Heaven we will meet again.
—Ever remembered by his loving wife, Margaret and family.

LORENSON—In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Edward Axel Lorenson (Wrench), accidently killed June 24, 1962.

To live in hearts we leave behind
Is not to die.
—Ever remembered and sadly missed by Mom and Dad, sisters Esther and Elinor.

SMITH—In loving memory of Ralph W. Smith who passed away June 24, 1965.

Peacefully sleeping
Free from all pain
In Gods keeping
Till we meet again.
—Wife and family.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

H. St. John Ingram of Kent, England, writes with typical British understatement, "Here is a rubber bridge hand of considerable interest. West's queen of diamonds held the first trick and his jack the second. East playing the four and deuce. West made an error. He should have shifted to the king of hearts. East was marked with the ten of diamonds and the only hope for the defence was to collect either two heart tricks or one heart and one trump. Anyway, West led another diamond. Declarer ruffed and played ace and ten of trumps. His idea was to win the expected heart return, cash two clubs ruff a low club, enter dummy with the jack of trumps and discard both heart losers on the last two clubs.

"East was no fool and led a trump right back. Declarer could only discard one heart and lost four tricks.

"Declarer made his error at trick four. His first trump lead should have been the ten. This would leave a sure extra entry to dummy and he would have made the hand in spite of failure of either black suit to break evenly."

We can't agree with Mr. Ingram's criticism of West's failure to lead a heart since we can visualize lots of situations where he would be dropping the kind into declarer's ace-queen but we do admire his suggestion of how South should have played the hand. On the other hand the suggested play is one of those safety plays that don't appeal to us. It would be suicide against a 5-1 club break and singleton queen of spades, as an example.

We sort of favor a compromise play. South should cash the ace of spades at trick four, enter dummy with a club at trick five and lead a low spade to his ten at trick six. He wouldn't mind losing to a doubleton queen of spades in the West hand since he would still have his two entries to dummy. The only way this play could lose would be for West to hold three spades to the queen and return the suit when he got in.

FEEL LIKE A SWEEPSTAKE WINNER!

Some friends of mine have picked out a country home they want and have asked me to sell the lovely home they bought new from me two years ago. In the two years they have lavished it with additions, decorating, tasteful decor and landscaping. I really feel the first viewer will be the lucky buyer. It is a 3-bedroom, full-basement home of about 1,200 sq. ft. and is as clean and lovely as a Centennial Dollar. Among some of the things they have added are lifetime wallpaper, feature walls where they are most effective, an enclosed attached garage, extra efficient insulation, a double sink, a fully landscaped lot and much more. Best of all, they want this country property and have actually priced their city home at a real loss.

PRICE ONLY $21,500

Warren Probe Critics Scrutinized

NEW YORK (CP)—The Associated Press has delivered to U.S. newspapers for use tomorrow the longest story ever moved on AP wires—a 17,000-word study of the Warren commission report on the Kennedy assassination and of the works of critics who have challenged the report's findings.

Keith Fuller, assistant general manager of the U.S. news cooperative, says AP wanted to determine "just what was wrong with the Warren report and right with its critics," and adds:

"We found out and we think our readers should know: A lot is right about the Warren report. And a lot is wrong about its critics."

The story is the work of AP Newsfeatures writers Sid Moody and Bernard Gavzer and took seven months in research and writing.

Fuller, in a message to editors, says AP undertook the project as a public service, prompted by doubts that have arisen in the 2½ years since the Warren report was issued.

The commission found that Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone, was responsible for the death of President Kennedy in Dallas, Tex., Nov. 22, 1963.

Aside from a detailed study of the Warren report, and inter views with many of the commission's senior counsel, the AP team studied in particular the works of critics Mark Lane, who wrote Rush to Judgment, and Jay Epstein, author of Inquest.

The AP story says Lane and other critics have produced little in the way of new evidence and says their "case rests on the same bedrock as the commission's—the Warren report."

It poses the questions:

"Have they used, or abused, it?

"Are the critics innocent of the guilt they charge the commission: of distortion, sly selection of convenient facts, editing of truth?"

In reference to Rush to Judgment, the AP story says: "Few readers have the volumes, much less the time to check Lane's thousands of citations. A pity."

The AP team did check such footnotes and references.

While they found shortcomings by the commission, they found more in the books of the critics.

Says Fuller: "The intent was not to blanket the report but to uncover the critics to see if their claims were fact or fable. We think the AP story does show where some of the nation's doubt was seeded: In distortion, in unbalanced editing, in slanting by some of the critics."

Retirement Again Deferred 3 Months

Queen's Printer Albert Sutton today was given another three-month deferment of his automatic retirement by a provincial cabinet order.

Mr. Sutton has been working under such deferments since Sept. 30, 1965, when he was due to retire under the compulsory regulations setting 65 as superannuation age.

CONGRATULATIONS were offered to Special Constable Peter Davis, right, who received Auxiliary Police Association efficiency award on completion of training course for 32 special constables. Making the presentation is J. H. Erb, provincial coordinator. In the centre is officer in charge of the course, Alan R. Foster.

Policemen Are 'No' Figures

The average motorist thinks he can play games with the driving laws.

But it's a deadly game, warns traffic expert Alan H. Rossiter.

Staff supervisor of Vancouver city police traffic division, he told delegates to Northwestern University Traffic Institute's seminar in Victoria Friday:

"Policemen can never have a popular image. They are the 'No' figure in our society.

"Traffic policemen can never accept motor vehicle laws as a game.

"If a motorist asks for a chance and the policeman gives it to him, then he's wasting his time."

33 YEARS IN JOB

Soft-spoken Superintendent Rossiter is a veteran of 33 years in police work, 20 of them in traffic.

He regards the management of the automobile as the most important issue in public safety today.

This requires strong enforcement and consequently unpopular policemen, he said.

"The policeman is constantly being directed by his superintendent to present a stern appearance," he said. "He cannot do a good job and be popular."

He supports the issuance of official identification to every citizen and says it his understanding that so do most police administrators.

PREVENT CRIME

The cards, he said, would help in the prevention of crime, particularly forgery, rather than the apprehension of criminals, he said.

"Identification cards would also help us to notify a person's next of kin in the event of an accident," he said.

Policemen, he said, have taken an oath to enforce all the laws. Any changes must come from the legislature.

"There have always been ridiculous laws. But they have always been changed in time to prevent a breakdown in general law and order."

INSIDE CITY HALL

Ride 'May Get Rough' Until Next Election Time

By JIM HUME

Well, well, the natives were a little restless at city council this week.

First, Ald. Lloyd Clarkson serving notice that his questions would be constant from here on in and then Ald. Ian Stewart hurling a flaming spear at the feet of the administration with an extremely warlike gesture.

Hume

More power to both of them, for in this Lotus Land we do tend to get complacent and worry more about the weekend than the business at hand.

With Ald. Hugh Ramsay also making noises which sound like swords being honed on the grinding wheel, it could be an interesting second half of the year.

Add to that the fact that Ald. Robert Baird is already conscious that December could be famine time at the polls and we have a local situation which should provide some sparkling, if sometimes bellicose, debate in council and committee.

Department heads please take note: the ride from here on in may be rough.

City manager Dennis Young is an ardent fly fisherman—between bouts of training dogs to fetch and carry birds he has pranged on the wing.

For years he has mocked quietly the efforts of city solicitor Terry O'Grady to match his prowess with rod and line.

Needling an ordinary lawyer is one thing. Needling a cynic with a name like O'Grady, ah, that is tempting fate a little too blatantly.

Last weekend the mellow-voiced descendant of Erin caught a 20-pound salmon. (He says it was "about 20 pounds" but considerably dried out by the time he got it on the bathroom scales.)

Monday morning he arrived at city hall with a hefty hunk of salmon neatly wrapped for Mr. Young.

It was a good-sized piece of fish, too. Neatly trimmed from the body just behind the gills.

Monday, as will be recalled, was a hot day. Not exactly suitable for storing fish heads, but ideal for a puckish lawyer intent on proving that he can indeed catch fish.

Let it be recorded for all time.

Residents of Cook Street are complaining to council about the pigeons in the one to 100 block.

They are, claim nine signers of a petition, creating a health hazard and undue noise.

Can't understand the noise bit, unless the coo of Cook Street pigeons is more strident than the coo of Gordon Head pigeons.

Sounds like another matter for the regional board because pigeons have only the vaguest idea of municipal boundaries.

A short sharp diplomatic note from school board chairman Peter Bunn stating: "Of the $6,281,350 construction so far assigned to architects ($376,981 in fees) $3,616,350 ($216,981 in fees) has gone to Victoria architects, $1,995,000 ($117,300 in fees) to Vancouver architects.

"The reason the board decided on this action (the hiring of Vancouver architects) was to speed up the whole construction program and also to get a more diversified design presentation."

Peter telephoned later to say the letter was for information only, but I think it fair enough to pass on.

That doesn't mean I agree with the board's decision. Far from it. I think the local firms could have handled the work, and well.

And I hope that the board, in its anxiety to get a big job done, doesn't overlook the fact that in the past all the delays could not be charged to architects.

There have been times when school board staffers could have used a flick of the whip to get things moving. Right, Peter?

I'll Run Again, —Dodd

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator Thomas J. Dodd, censured by his colleagues for personal use of campaign funds, vowed Friday to serve out his current term and seek vindication from Connecticut voters by running for a third term.

"I will be here tomorrow," the white-haired Connecticut Democrat told the Senate after it passed judgment on him Friday. "I will be here every day, doing my work as best as I can do it."

Dodd told reporters he had not planned to run for a third term in 1970.

"Everything's changed. I've got to."

The Senate rendered its decision on the ninth day of debate, climaxing an agonizing period for the 60-year-old Dodd and his fellow senators.

The Senate, by a 92-to-5 vote, upheld a finding of its ethics committee that Dodd converted to his personal benefit at least $116,083 in campaign and testimonial funds.

WITHDRAW CHARGE

But it voted 51 to 45 to drop the bipartisan committee's second charge—that Dodd double-billed the Senate and private groups for the same travel expenses.

Dodd was the second member of Congress this year to be punished for financial misconduct. Earlier the House of Representatives refused to seat Adam Clayton Powell, a Democrat from New York's Harlem district, on grounds he misused government funds and was contemptuous toward a House committee and New York courts.

The punishment does not deprive him of any of his rights and privileges as a senator, nor, will it take away his chairmanship of the Senate juvenile delinquency subcommittee.

He said during the debate he would rather be dead than dishonored.

The committee's report to the Senate was filed April 27 after a 14-month investigation of Dodd's financial affairs.

In recommending censure for use of political funds for personal expenses, the committee said Dodd received at least $450,274 from contributions to his 1964 re-election campaign and from a series of fund-raising testimonials between 1961 and 1965.

Dodd acknowledged that some $3,100 in campaign funds was spent on personal items but blamed this on faulty bookkeeping by subordinates and said he was unaware of it until the committee's investigation.

As for about $170,000 in proceeds from the testimonials, Dodd claimed the money was intended as a gift to use as he saw fit.

Dodd acknowledged dual billings in a stipulation of facts he entered into with the committee, but blamed what he called the sloppy book-keeping of Michael V. O'Hare, a former aide.

Quebec Wants Treaty Powers

MONTREAL (CP)—Premier Daniel Johnson said today Quebec must have the freedom to negotiate international agreements as a condition of equality and cultural survival.

Mr. Johnson was speaking at Quebec Day ceremonies at Expo 67, coinciding with the French - Canadian holiday, St. Jean Baptiste Day.

He said equality is not possible for the French cultural community in Canada "if Quebec cannot negotiate freely the agreements necessary for preservation of its particular heritage."

Mr. Johnson's reference to such agreements follows by two days a speech by a Quebec cabinet minister who said Quebec wants international treaty-making power.

Marcel Masse, minister without portfolio, told the St. Jean Baptiste Society in Montreal Thursday this power should be written into the Canadian constitution.

Only the federal state can make international treaties under the British North America Act.

Quebec has a cultural and education agreement with France, but this was signed under the authority of an umbrella agreement negotiated by the French and Canadian governments.

Mr. Johnson said international agreements would help Quebec protect the French-Canadian culture through links with other French - speaking communities.

Twins Decide Who Will Take the Rap

A young jail inmate who pleaded guilty Friday to cashing six bad cheques told the court his twin brother was also in jail because he took the blame for crimes he had not committed.

David Barkley, 19, said that on an earlier occasion his brother Richard had pleaded guilty to some of the charges against him in the hope that David would then get a suspended sentence.

"Now he's in jail serving time for me and I'm in jail serving my own time," he told Magistrate Ostler.

He said the charges against him had been filed in the wrong name and termed it a "big court mixup."

While he and his brother were not identical twins, they looked alike and both had speech impediments, said David. He added they'd been charged under each other's name in Toronto on another occasion.

David admitted cashing six worthless cheques totalling a little over $200 on May 25, four of them at Eaton's and two at Esquimalt groceries.

He got clothing, shoes and groceries with the cheques and sold a $47 hairdryer for $15.

Prosecutor J. W. Anderson said a woman who claimed to be the boys' mother said their name was Morrison.

"It's quite the most extraordinary case I've ever heard," said the magistrate asking that a probation officer begin to prepare a pre-sentence report.

David's cases were adjourned to Monday. The prosecutor said there were more charges pending.

Wine 'Factory' In Rectory

TORONTO (CP) — An Anglican minister says he makes 75 gallons of wine a year in his church rectory and has never had a complaint from his parishioners.

Rev. Graham Cotter, minister of St. Mark's Anglican Church, told about it at a fund-raising lecture to parishioners on "Drink-it-yourself home winemaking."

Mr. Cotter says he first began making wine when he was working on his doctorate at the University of Toronto. Both he and his wife liked a glass of wine with dinner but couldn't afford to buy it. So he decided to make it himself.

Parents Sue Israel For Son's Injuries

LINDEN, N.J. (UPI) — The parents of a sailor wounded in the attack on the USS Liberty have filed suit against Israel seeking $50,000,000 in punitive damages for his injuries.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Reilly took the action in a letter to the World Court at The Hague. It was filed in behalf of their son Thomas, 20, in critical condition in an army hospital in Germany. The Letter asked:

"That the government of Israel be condemned without recourse.

"That the captains of the torpedo gunboats and the strafing aircraft be brought before a tribunal of the United States and Israel and be charged with the murder and maiming of inocent persons.

"That the government of Israel be compelled to pay punitive damages in the amount of $50,000,000 to the plaintiffs for the severe suffering and pain, mental and physical suffering unduly caused by this atrocious, unforgivable and inhumane act."

In a letter sent home last week by another son aboard the Liberty, Robert, 18, who was shaken but not injured, said the sailors on the deck of the ship were "sitting ducks" for the Israeli planes and some of his best friends were cut into three pieces by the gunfire.

"I never saw anything so ugly in my life," he wrote.

ARAB REFUGEES cling to each other after safe crossing of wrecked Allenby Bridge over River Jordan. The boy and his baby brother are among thousands fleeing Israeli rule in western Jordan this week. (AP Wirephoto)

DEATH THREATS ALLEGED

Israelis Crush Arab Villages

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Palestinian refugees charged today that Israeli troops occupying the Jordan River's west bank are systematically deporting inhabitants of villages along the 1949 armistice line between Jordan and Israel.

Refugees, interviewed in their temporary quarters in an Amman school building, claimed villagers are being removed by force, intimidation and trickery.

Several refugees said they were threatened with death if they tried to return to their homes.

They said at least two villages on the western edge of the Israeli - occupied west bank region have been levelled by Israeli demolition crews and bulldozers.

Other villages were partly destroyed and some of their young men taken away by the Israeli troops, the refugees said.

CROSS TO JORDAN

Thousands of refugees have crossed into east Jordan since the ceasefire.

The villages affected are Qalqilye, an agricultural community of 12,000 about 30 miles northwest of Jerusalem, and Imwas, a village of 3,000 twelve miles west of Jerusalem.

An Israeli spokesman in Tel Aviv has denied charges that Israeli forces had evacuated Qualqilye and demolished the town. He admitted the town was badly damaged, but said this resulted from the fighting.

The spokesman also denied that Palestinian refugees were being herded across the Jordan River by Israeli soldiers.

A 75 - year - old farmer and landowner from Imwas said the Israelis tricked him and his family into leaving the village by saying they were being taken to the nearby town of Rammalah for two hours. They were not permitted to return," the farmer sneaked back and found "all the houses had been blown up, including mine."

HARD LINE HARDENS IN ISRAEL

TEL AVIV, Israel (Reuters)—Political and diplomatic moves now under way abroad to soften Israel's stand on its captured territories appeared today to have had the opposite effect.

Outwardly, the nation was marking time, awaiting the end of international deliberations in the United Nations General Assembly and between U.S. President Johnson and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

But behind the scenes plans to ensure security were being implemented.

RIVALS SPREAD TORY NET

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Three candidates for the leadership of the Progressive Conservative party dropped into Victoria today, seeking grass roots support for the September convention.

Former finance minister Donald Fleming put party unity as a paramount issue, while former agriculture minister Alvin Hamilton stressed the need of rebuilding the party into an alliance of farmers, labor and businessmen.

George Hees, the former trade minister, was to arrive this afternoon.

The visits were prompted by the meeting here of the party's national executive, planning details of the leadership convention, and a barbecue this afternoon in honor of MP George Chatterton, Esquimalt-Saanich.

UNITY FIRST

"We must achieve unity in the party at the September convention—this goal transcends all others in importance and it was this that brought me back into politics," said Mr. Fleming.

He tended to dismiss current New Democratic Party strength in public opinion polls, which earlier this year showed the NDP ahead of the Conservatives.

This pointed to "a present condition," he said, one which could be "quickly overcome" given the choice of a leader around whom the party can unite and a "clear and responsible policy for action."

TORIES GAINING

Mr. Hamilton said the NDP's "temporary" lead has disappeared but he stressed this should not result in Conservative complacency.

The Conservatives were gaining in rural Quebec while NDP strength was in the major cities. This urban strength was causing "great concern."

"I do have, I think, some ability to attract votes from the NDP that other candidates don't have," he said.

Asked why, he replied this was hard but "people say I don't sound like a Conservative."

He said the NDP will not remain for long the party of labor, and is moving into the "idealistic middle class."

"You are not going to handle idealistic people by shouting Socialism at them," he said.

NO HANDOUTS

The way to fight, he said, is to put forth more practical alternatives, away from the "handout philosophy" and towards self help programs.

He cited the Agricultural

Talks Boost Peace Hopes

Summit Resumes Sunday

GLASSBORO, N.J. (CP)—Hopes have risen for U.S.-Soviet resolve to mend frayed relations as U.S. President Johnson and Premier Kosygin of Russia talked longer than expected at a summit meeting and then scheduled a second round for Sunday.

Just how much was accomplished after more than five hours was unknown. The main areas of discussion were the Middle East, Vietnam and a treaty to curb the spread of nuclear weapons.

American officials pointed to the nuclear treaty as promising, with prospects of a draft agreement being ready soon for Geneva talks.

Also raised—but not emphasized apparently—was the question of the U.S. and the Soviet Union getting involved in a costly new nuclear missiles defences competition. Overhanging this was China's test last week of a hydrogen bomb—much sooner than expected.

MARK OF FRIENDLINESS

The friendliness exhibited by Kosygin and Johnson was marked in this first encounter between them. It was the first U.S.-Soviet summit conference since the late president Kennedy and former premier Khrushchev faced each other at Vienna in 1961.

Johnson told a Democratic group in Los Angeles that he and Kosygin had agreed they both want "a world of peace for our grandchildren."

He said: "We reached no new agreements." Then he paused and, departing from his prepared text, added, "almost, but not quite."

The air of mutual goodwill—publicly at least — contrasted with diplomatic bickering that finally led up to selection of this little college and market town as the site, midway between Washington and New York and 15 miles south of Philadelphia.

Johnson did not want to go to New York, where Kosygin has been fighting at the United Nations to salvage the Soviet position in the Middle East. Kosygin refused to come to Washington or some other suggested meeting places.

Discussions about direct bilateral relations would continue in New York next week between State Secretary Dean Rusk

REDS MASSACRE U.S. COMPANY

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese troops mauled an American infantry company in fierce battle, killing 76 and wounding 25, 60 miles north of Pleiku in the central highlands, the U.S. Command said today.

It was one of the worst U.S. defeats of the war.

Spokesmen said enemy casualties were not known. There were reports the enemy troops wore black berets.

The battered company, which included many newcomers, had just pulled out of its night defensive perimeter shortly after 7 a.m. Two platoons, a total of about 80 men, apparently became confused and disorganized and were cut off from the rest of the unit.

Sabotage Eyed In Jet Crash

BLOSSBURG, Pa. (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation was asked to investigate a "strong suggestion of sabotage" Friday night after a jetliner crashed into the side of a mountain, killing the 34 persons on board.

The request of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover was made by Robert E. Peach, president of Mohawk Airlines, owner of the BAC-111 which crashed on a flight to Washington, D.C.

In a telegram to Hoover Friday night, Peach said "evidence has developed in course of notification of next of kin of crash victims which leads to strong suggestion of sabotage."

He did not give any details.

The plane, Flight 40 from Syracuse, N.Y., plunged in a ball of flames onto Blossburg Mountain in north central Pennsylvania at 2:50 p.m., shortly after it took off in overcast from Elmira, N.Y.

Residents of Blossburg, a town of 1,956, about 30 miles south of Corning, N.Y., said they could tell the airliner was in trouble as it flew over.

"It sounded like the engine kept cutting out," one man said. Louis Schultz said he saw the plane's left wing on fire and pieces of debris falling off.

PLANE DISINTEGRATES

"It was making a noise like a whistle," he said. "It was just like a toy going down—going down sideways."

Schultz later visited the crash scene and said the fuselage was gone, "just as if someone had stuck some dynamite in the centre and blew it to pieces."

Bank of B.C. To Take Over Western Bank?

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Bank of British Columbia is considering a takeover of the troubled Bank of Western Canada, it was learned today.

Neither bank has yet opened its doors, and the Bank of B.C. is in the midst of a campaign to sell $75,000,000 in shares. (See Page 11.)

Sources also indicated the B.C. bank's share-selling campaign likely will be scaled down sharply, perhaps to $25,000,000 despite the belief of Premier Bennett it could sell $250,000,000.

A bank spokesman confirmed that "tentative discussions of a very general nature" have been held with persons connected with Westbank

But he emphasized that other groups in Western Canada also have talked to Westbank, which was granted a charter by Parliament last December and was to have opened in March.

Total value of York Lambton's holdings in Westbank is 50.4 per cent, worth about $6,500,000.

NIAGARA IMPRESSES RED LEADER

'Are There Any Fish in River?'

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP)—Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin took a look at the American and Horseshoe Falls from an excursion steamer and a high observation tower today and then asked: "Are there any fish in the river?"

Kosygin flew here on a surprise visit because, his aide said, he wanted to see one of the seven natural wonders of the world.

Shortly after his arrival in a U.S. air force jet plane from New York City, Kosygin was taken to the Prospect Point observation tower of the American Falls.

He and his party, which included Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin, descended to the base of the American Falls. Kosygin walked to the Maid of the Mist landing and waved to tourists embarking on a Lower Niagara River run to the base of the Horseshoe Falls—half in Canada and half in the United States.

It was at this point he asked whether there were any fish in the river and was informed that there were.

About 15 minutes later, a second excursion boat crossed the river from Canada and Kosygin and his party boarded it. The boat proceeded past the American Falls and to the base of the Horseshoe Falls.

Kosygin wore a rain coat with hood to protect him from spray. He did not put the hood on his head until the heavy spray from the falls drenched all aboard.

Back on shore, Kosygin rode to the top of the 218-foot observation tower and overlooked the cataracts. Through an interpreter, he was told by Mayor E. Dent Lackey of the history of the falls and how the U.S. and Canada control the water spillage over the brinks for electricity production.

Kosygin's next stop was at Prospect Point, adjacent to the American Falls. He stood at the site of a gigantic rock slide in 1954. Another smaller slide occurred to his right May 11 last.

From the falls, Kosygin drove five miles north to the Niagara Power Project, one of the largest in the world. From there he planned to lunch at a Niagara Falls restaurant.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Scurry Spree In Spotlight

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prospects of a major mineral find ignited such a hectic buying spree in Scurry-Rainbow this week that trading in the stock was suspended.

Trading in Scurry halted early in Thursday's session on orders from the Toronto Stock Exchange. It is not to resume until a technical report is made public on the company's announced nickel, copper and cobalt find in northeastern Saskatchewan.

Elsewhere on Canada's major stock exchanges trading was dull and indecisive with only a handful of issues scoring solid gains.

At Toronto the industrial index, which measures the price movements of key stocks, edged up .11 to 166.38. At Montreal, it advanced .25 to 165.79.

Scurry-Rainbow jumped 11⅝ to 42⅝ on 282,000 shares from Tuesday's opening to the time it was suspended. It could have been bought at 21½ a month ago.

Trading in the stock was delayed last Friday at the request of the company until information of the find could be provided.

Details were announced late in Monday's session, but the exchange withheld trading until Tuesday to give the financial community time to digest the news.

REACHES HIGH

Because Scurry is a Calgary-based oil producer, it helped push the western oil index to a yearly high. The index climbed 11.36 to 183.54 after touching a high of 183.91.

At Toronto, other western oil stocks continued to strengthen on speculation that Canada will be able to increase its exports of oil to the U.S. as a result of the Middle East crisis.

However analysts say this is a long-term outlook as the industry must first meet the needs of Quebec and the Maritimes, especially if Middle East supplies are cut off from these areas for more than a few weeks.

Hudson's Bay rose 4¼ to 39, Canadian Superior 3⅝ to 44⅝ and Great Plains 2 to 14.

Trans - Canada Pipe Lines, which touched a high of 33½ earlier in the week, closed with a gain of ½ to 31⅛. The company asked Parliament to allow it to more than double its capitalization of common shares and increase its preferred shares by five times.

The stock rose sharply Tuesday after the U.S. Federal Power Commission approved its $212,000,000 project to build a pipeline south of the Great Lakes. The line will go from Emerson, Man., through Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan to Sarnia, Ont.

The approval means Trans-Canada can go ahead with plans to pipe more badly-needed natural as from fields in western Canada to the East.

MOVES UP

Home Oil, which owns about 17 per cent of Trans-Canada's shares, moved up. The A stock gained ¾ to 20⅜ and the B stock 1⅛ to 22¾.

Contributing to the market's indecisiveness was a weak New York market. There was also a prediction by the Canadian Construction Association that 1967 may show the first year-to-year decrease in value of construction since 1960.

Alcan dropped 1⅝ to 29⅜, Magna Electronics 1¼ to 19, Massey-Ferguson 1⅛ to 21, CPR ¾ to 71 and Bell Telephone ⅝ to 48⅞.

Ford of Canada moved up 16 to 162⅝ although company officials could give no reason for the jump. International Minerals gained 3¾ to 37¼, Versatile 2⅞ to 40½ and Moore Corp. 2¼ to 32½.

On index, golds were up .97 to 173.70 while base metals eased .03 to 102.72. Volume was 13,569,000 shares compared with 15,222,000 last week.

At Montreal, utilities advanced .45 to 148.95, banks .30 to 124.72 and papers .38 to 112.15. Volume was 3,907,000 shares compared with 4,402,000 last week.

NEW PRESIDENT of Institute of Chartered Accountants of B.C. is Donald McL. Anderson of Vancouver. He was elected at the recent annual meeting at Prince George. Member of the council is Ronald G. Campion of Victoria.

Bethlehem Chief Raps Tax Report

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bethlehem Copper Corp. is a perfect example of a mining company that should never have come into production according to the Carter Tax Commission's reasoning, says company president Patrick M. Reynolds.

He said the commission has "arrogantly brushed aside all representations made on behalf of the industry" in eliminating the three-year tax exemption period for new mines.

"Under this recommended tax system, Bethlehem would never have come into being," he told shareholders at the company's annual meeting Thursday.

Mr. Reynolds said the commission stated there is no evidence that concessions to the mining industry have had a "beneficial effect on the over-all economic well-being of Canadians."

"Without tax incentives we could not have obtained financing," Mr. Reynolds said. "Even with the tax incentives we were refused financing by all whom we approached in North America.

"Imagine our position today if the Carter recommendations had been in effect in 1960 and 1961."

He listed 12 benefits to the economy which have come with opening of its mine in the Highland Valley area of B.C.

These included payment of the original $5,000,000 debt, providing employment for 250 people, spending of $17,000,000 on construction equipment, payment of annual local taxes amounting to $100,000 and other federal and provincial taxes and revitalizing of Ashcroft, a dying community, through building of homes, a hospital and recreational facilities.

"This is the company Mr. Carter suggests may not have had a beneficial effect on the over-all economic well-being of Canadians," Mr. Reynolds said.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Upturn Seen by Majority

NEW YORK (AP)—The attention of many businessmen, economists and government officials centred this week on the economic outlook for the second half of 1967.

Opinion was divided, but the majority seemed to feel there will be an upturn in the next six months.

Many factors were involved in the various projections: Inventory adjustment, capital investment, consumer spending, taxes, government spending, Vietnam and the Middle East.

Among the sources making forecasts were Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York and Standard and Poor's Corp., an investment advisory firm.

Morgan Guaranty said:

"The customary business indicators continue to show that high-level sluggishness remains the dominant characteristic of the evolving business situation. But performance is nevertheless consistent with the widely-held view that conditions favorable to business acceleration in the second half are developing."

Standard and Poor's commented:

"A modified version of the late 1965 experience—a rapidly rising economy, a fast increase in profits, an expanding money supply and rising interest rates—may well be in the making for late 1967."

Indications were that the downward adjustment of heavy unventories was continuing. Some said it had been completed.

HOPE OF INCREASE

Restoration of the seven-per-cent U.S. business investment tax credit gave hopes of increased spending for new plant and equipment. Railways placed orders for new cars.

Consumers were expected to step up their spending to parallel the sustained rise in disposable income. Among the beneficiaries would be producers of consumer, durable goods, particularly automobiles.

Whether the rate of government spending increases will continue depends mainly on whether the Vietnam war will escalate and on what transpires in the Middle East.

Automobile production this week was estimated at 177,000 passenger cars, up 3.6 per cent from 170,849 the previous week but down 5.6 per cent from 187,000 a year ago.

Steel output last week slipped to the lowest level of the year. Mills turned out 2,210,000 tons of steel, down 3.1 per cent from 2,281,000 tons the previous week.

Sharp Increase In House Starts During May

OTTAWA (CP) — Construction started during May on 16,096 houses and apartments, 57.4 per cent more than in May last year, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. has reported.

The housing starts in May were at an annual rate of 171,400, compared with 134,700 in April.

The Crown-owned agency said that construction activity in March, April and May offset the housing slump in January and February. Starts in the first five months of they ear were 6.2 per cent higher than in the same period last year.

May housing starts showed a 53.9-per-cent increase in single detached houses and a 60.4-per-cent increase in apartment units over a year earlier.

Some lovely bargains at Miss Frith's

Well, another anniversary has rolled around for Miss Frith's . . . their 47th, we believe . . . and as a result you'll find some sparkling bargains in every department . . . Take millinery, for example: one-of-a-kind imported chapeaux selling for half price . . . other groups of hats are greatly reduced . . . some as low as $3.99 (among which we spotted some charmers!) . . . Handbags are similarly reduced . . . price tags have been substantially snipped on coats and summer dresses and various other goodies . . . For those gala summer evenings weddings, and other events for which you want to look especially pretty, you'll find a good array of dressy dresses on the mezzanine . . . mostly chiffons and light, airy prints in loose, cool, comfortable styles you'll really enjoy wearing . . . And how better could you celebrate Canada's birthday next weekend than by outfitting yourself with smart Canadian-made sportswear? . . . Miss Frith's have an exciting display of simply everything you need for casual wear . . . and while many of these lines have U.S. labels, they're actually made right here in Canada . . . with better workmanship and better materials than their U.S. counterparts . . . usually cheaper too! . . . So hie yourself to Miss Frith's this coming week and get ready for the holiday! . . . Miss Frith Millinery and Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

Summer's mad, mad color combinations will carry over into fall clothes.

Fine furniture for gracious living . . .

Nothing like being away for a while to appreciate what we have here in Victoria! . . . The Gallery at Home Furniture contains traditional furniture as fine as any you'll find anywhere . . . in fact considerably better than most! . . . The other day they showed us some delightful corner curio cabinets just in from England . . . they're slim and compact . . . just made for that empty corner you've never known quite what to do with . . . Walnut or mahogany finish . . . with wooden shelves to hold your bibelots . . . New too are a couple of mahogany kidney-shaped desks . . . One has plain top, the other has inlaid genuine leather top with gold leaf tooling . . . very elegant! . . . There's a mahogany tambour desk with intriguing side-rolling top panels behind which are concealed a lot of little drawers and compartments . . . Two long drawers beneath the drop leaf desk . . . Something else that fascinated us is a mahogany wig stand . . . copied from those used by the be-wigged gentlemen and ladies of yore . . . You probably wouldn't want to use it for your own modern hairpiece . . . but it makes a handsome plant stand, and we rather think that's the intention! . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

Keep your cologne in the refrigerator for a refreshing pick-me-up when the temperature soars.

Round out your summer wardrobe . . .

Despite the fact that Madam and Eve have been selling summer dresses like mad during the past weeks and are now starting to think in terms of fall . . . there is still a goodly number of mighty nifty little summer frocks on hand . . . in sizes ranging from 5 to 14 or 15 . . . and $26 will buy practically any one of them! . . . A few that caught our eye . . . a Josef Ribcoff dress of navy checked linen with button-trimmed navy band running down one side, short sleeves . . . a couple of Nat Gordons . . . one cocoa and beige with diagonally slanted front . . . size 10 . . . the other a green and very pale beige, sleeveless with cowl collar . . . size 14 . . . Ribcoff's "mini-chemise" dress of light printed voile in various shades has proved tremendously popular, and there are a few of them left . . . Tailored like a shirt . . . and they're only "mini" on a tall girl . . . reasonably modest on the rest of us . . . A very Vogue-ish dress by Nat Gordon has a cross-over front . . . ocean blue and sea green used in juxtaposition . . . and mighty effective it is, too! . . . Size 8, this one . . . Some crimpknits in one or two-piece styles . . . navy, turquoise, orange . . . There's a plain bark brown crimpknit that could give you year-round service . . . Brown, you may have heard, promises to be a high fashion color for next fall . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

Pale, skin-toned nail polish looks better than bright shades on sun-tanned hands.

The Shrimp's your ticket to a carefree summer . . .

When Danny Hajnal at House of Glamour designed the Shrimp cut . . . we don't think even he realized how very popular it was going to prove to be! . . . And the beauty of it is, no two cuts are alike . . . each is designed to suit the individual and her type of hair . . . even fine hair looks vibrant and healthy with this artful cut with its longer top hair, and neckline moulded femininely into the scalp . . . So care-free and easy to look after . . . Come in from the wind or out of the pool and a flip of a brush is all you need! . . . We should add that the "Shrimp" is not confined to the young, but is adaptable to all ages . . . This weekend will be a particularly happy one for visitors Mr. and Mrs. Albrecht Wormer, for it will mark their second wedding anniversary. They'll have two days to celebrate, Sunday being the anniversary of their civil ceremony in the City Hall (required by German law) and Monday, the day of their church wedding service. Visiting German Couple Recall Beginning of Romance

IT STARTED WITH A HAIRCUT

By PAT DUFOUR

When 22-year-old Karin Wormer first met her husband she cut his hair . . . and he obviously enjoyed every snip of it.

Sound like an unusual beginning of a courtship? Not if you live in Germany, says Mrs. Albrecht Wormer.

This vivacious visitor, who's here with her husband on a seven-week visit, is a beautician and the barbering was part of her three years' course.

"We have to do everything, men and women's hair-styling, massage, manicure and all that's needed for good grooming. In Germany, we work in small beauty shops, one side of which is for men and the other for women. I met Albrecht when I was a student six years ago. I chose him as my model because he had such good hair."

The Wormers live in the West German city of Mannheim, and this is their first trip to Canada. They're here to visit Mrs. Wormer's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Heinz Mueller, and their two children, 10-year-old Karen (named for her aunt) and Harry, who is 13.

The last time Mr. Mueller saw Karin she was seven years old. He agrees that his little sister has blossomed into a long-legged beauty.

With European flair, Karin wears clothes with the grace of a top-flight model. She reports that the miniskirt is still milady's favorite in Europe. With a delightful accent and appropriate gestures, she explains, "The skirts are way, way up . . . there's nothing 'ere or dere." She points to her breasts and her thighs.

She wears her hair in the short, razor-cut fashion that's topping the polls in Europe, edging out the Courreges style, which is long at the back, shaped around the face and named for the Parisian who created it.

The Wormers came over on a plane chartered by two groups, the German Co-operative and the Dutch Workmen's Union. Like the Wormers, most of the passengers are in Canada to visit relatives.

Both Karin and Albrecht are enthusiastic about Canada. "The people are so friendly to we Germans and much easier to get to know than our own countrymen."

Here less than a week, the Wormers are tempted to try to come back . . . for good. But Albrecht has misgivings. "I'm a purchasing agent with an engineering firm and it would be hard for me to get the same sort of job here. My English is not too good."

Both say that Germans have much more opportunity to speak English in their own country since the American troops have been stationed there and report that English is taught as a second language in high school. To a lesser degree, they can also study French, Latin and Russian.

When the Wormers leave Victoria, they'll be joined by the Muellers who will travel with them as far as Edmonton where they'll board a charter plane for home. Says Mary Mueller, "We want to show them as much as we can. We have a trailer and intend to take our time." She lists some of the places on the itinerary.

At the top of the list is the Rockies. Her eager visitors explain, "We must see them. Just like the maple leaf, to us they mean Canada."

Honor Priest At Reception

More than 200 parishioners gathered in the parish hall of Queen of Peace Church recently to honor their priest, Fr. M. J. McNamara, at a reception. The occasion marked the 25th anniversary of his ordination.

Using an Irish motif, the hall was decorated in silver and green. A Gaelic inscription was put on the large cake at the head table. White flowers and silver candelabra completed the table decor.

J. J. Comerford was master of ceremonies, introducing F. Blackley, president of the Men's Club, and Mrs. M. Kokran, president of the Catholic Women's League, who made a presentation of a wallet of money to the honor guest.

Russell Revoy presented Fr. McNamara with a gift from the altar boys. Fr. McNamara spoke briefly, thanking all those taking part.

Mrs. J. Pryke was in charge of the refreshments which were served buffet-style.

Visiting clergy at the reception were Msgr. A. J. Baker of Mount St. Mary, Fr. M. Costello, Fr. W. J. O'Brien of Langford and Fr. L. McLellan, former pastor of the church.

Completing the evening, Fr. O'Brien introduced Fr. McLellan, who made a presentation from the clergy and recalled memories of his own 25th anniversary, held in the same hall in 1945. His 40th anniversary was celebrated there in 1960.

REDS MASSACRE U.S. COMPANY

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese troops mauled an American infantry company in fierce battle, killing 76 and wounding 25, 60 miles north of Pleiku in the central highlands, the U.S. Command said today.

It was one of the worst U.S. defeats of the war.

Spokesmen said enemy casualties were not known. There were reports the enemy troops wore black berets.

The battered company, which included many newcomers, had just pulled out of its night defensive perimeter shortly after 7 a.m. Two platoons, a total of about 80 men, apparently became confused and disorganized and were cut off from the rest of the unit.

DEATH THREATS ALLEGED

Israelis Crush Arab Villages

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Palestinian refugees charged today that Israeli troops occupying the Jordan River's west bank are systematically deporting inhabitants of villages along the 1949 armistice line between Jordan and Israel.

Refugees, interviewed in their temporary quarters in an Amman school building, claimed villagers are being removed by force, intimidation and trickery.

Several refugees said they were threatened with death if they tried to return to their homes.

They said at least two villages on the western edge of the Israeli - occupied west bank region have been levelled by Israeli demolition crews and bulldozers.

Other villages were partly destroyed and some of their young men taken away by the Israeli troops, the refugees said.

CROSS TO JORDAN

Thousands of refugees have crossed into east Jordan since the ceasefire.

The villages affected are Qalqilye, an agricultural community of 12,000 about 30 miles northwest of Jerusalem, and Imwas, a village of 3,000 twelve miles west of Jerusalem.

An Israeli spokesman in Tel Aviv has denied charges that Israeli forces had evacuated Qualqilye and demolished the town. He admitted the town was badly damaged, but said this resulted from the fighting.

The spokesman also denied that Palestinian refugees were being herded across the Jordan River by Israeli soldiers.

A 75 - year - old farmer and landowner from Imwas said the Israelis tricked him and his family into leaving the village by saying they were being taken to the nearby town of Rammalah for two hours. They were not permitted to return." The farmer sneaked back and found "all the houses had been blown up, including mine."

B.C. Bank Considers Takeover of Westbank

Talks Boost Peace Hopes

GLASSBORO, N.J. (CP)—Hopes have risen for U.S.-Soviet resolve to mend frayed relations as U.S. President Johnson and Premier Kosygin of Russia talked longer than expected at a summit meeting and then scheduled a second round for Sunday.

Just how much was accomplished after more than five hours was unknown. The main areas of discussion were the Middle East, Vietnam and a treaty to curb the spread of nuclear weapons.

American officials pointed to the nuclear treaty as promising, with prospects of a draft agreement being ready soon for Geneva talks.

Also raised—but not emphasized apparently—was the question of the U.S. and the Soviet Union getting involved in a costly new nuclear missiles defences competition. Overhanging this was China's test last week of a hydrogen bomb—much sooner than expected.

MARK OF FRIENDLINESS

The friendliness exhibited by Kosygin and Johnson was marked in this first encounter between them. It was the first U.S.-Soviet summit conference since the late president Kennedy and former premier Khrushchev faced each other at Vienna in 1961.

Johnson told a Democratic group in Los Angeles that he and Kosygin had agreed they both want "a world of peace for our grandchildren."

He said: "We reached no new agreements." Then he paused and, departing from his prepared text, added, "almost, but not quite."

The air of mutual goodwill—publicly at least — contrasted with diplomatic bickering that finally led up to selection of this little college and market town as the site, midway between Washington and New York and 15 miles south of Philadelphia.

Johnson did not want to go to New York, where Kosygin has been fighting at the United Nations to salvage the Soviet position in the Middle East. Kosygin refused to come to Washington or some other suggested meeting places.

Discussions about direct bilateral relations would continue in New York next week between State Secretary Dean Rusk and Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko.

Kosygin, thanking the president for the invitation to the conference, said he had nothing to add to the statement "which I think has been very correctly drawn up."

He told more than 800 ac-

Three candidates for the leadership of the Progressive Conservative party dropped into Victoria today, seeking grass roots support for the September convention.

Former finance minister Donald Fleming put party unity as a paramount issue, while former agriculture minister Alvin Hamilton stressed the need of rebuilding the party into an alliance of farmers, labor and businessmen.

George Hees, the former trade minister, was to arrive this afternoon.

The visits were prompted by the meeting here of the party's national executive, planning details of the leadership convention, and a barbecue this afternoon in honor of MP George Chatterton, Esquimalt-Saanich.

UNITY FIRST

"We must achieve unity in the party at the September convention—this goal transcends all others in importance and it was this that brought me back into politics," said Mr. Fleming.

He tended to dismiss current New Democratic Party strength in public opinion polls, which earlier this year showed the NDP ahead of the Conservatives.

This pointed to "a present condition," he said, one which could be "quickly overcome" given the choice of a leader around whom the party can unite and a "clear and responsible policy for action."

Mr. Hamilton said the NDP's "temporary" lead has disappeared but he stressed this should not result in Conservative complacency.

Preliminary Talks Held

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Bank of British Columbia is considering a takeover of the troubled Bank of Western Canada, it was learned today.

Neither bank has yet opened its doors, and the Bank of B.C. is in the midst of a campaign to sell $75,000,000 in shares. (See Page 11.)

Sources also indicated the B.C. bank's share-selling campaign likely will be scaled down sharply, perhaps to $25,000,000 despite the belief of Premier Bennett it could sell $250,000,000.

A bank spokesman confirmed that "tentative discussions of a very general nature" have been held with persons connected with Westbank.

But he emphasized that other groups in Western Canada also have talked to Westbank, which was granted a charter by Parliament last December and was to have opened in March.

One of the factors in the takeover discussions by officials of the B.C. bank is the fate of its own share-selling campaign, which some investment dealers say is lagging badly.

Exact figures have not yet been compiled but only about $5,000,000 of the $75,000,000 B.C. bank equity sale has been realized since the four-week selling campaign began June 15.

Officially, the bank's target still is $75,000,000 with which to open its doors early next year. But it is known that the bank expects to reach only about $25,000,000, and will go into business on a somewhat smaller scale with that amount.

One highly-placed source said, however, that much depends on moves of Premier Bennett, who openly supports the bank and, at one time, tried unsuccessfully to convince Parliament his government should own 25 per cent of the shares. Mr. Bennett's son is a director of the bank.

Premier Bennett is known to have urged the bank to go for a $250,000,000 equity issue though many financial experts suggested $25,000,000. The $75,000,000 figure, the largest equity issue in Canada since the Second World War, was a compromise.

Although a growing number of small-investor orders for shares is coming in, large corporate buying in both the East and the West has been disappointing.

Total value of York Lambton's holdings in Westbank is 50.4 per cent, worth about $6,500,000.

3 Killed, 23 Hurt In Bus-Car Crash

MORRISBURG, Ont. (CP) — Two men and a woman were killed and 23 persons injured today when a bus and small foreign car collided on Highway 401 three miles east of here.

The dead were all occupants of the car, sliced in half by the crash. The victims were thrown from the vehicle on impact.

They were not identified but a fourth occupant of the westbound vehicle, which bore Quebec licence plates, is in Hotel Dieu Hospital in Cornwall along with 22 passengers from the bus. He was identified as Jack Palaloumdan of Montreal.

Injured passengers of the bus included:

Caroline Irvine and her daughter Beverly of Smiths Falls and Victorine Dwyer and Ida Dunlop of Carleton Place.

A second car was involved in the crash, which held up traffic on Highway 401 for two hours, but its occupants escaped injury.

The bus, owned by Rideau Lakes Coach Lines of Smiths Falls, left Carleton Place at 6:30 a.m. with 24 persons aboard. About two hours later it and the small car collided east of the Highway 31 underpass on an 18-mile undivided stretch of Highway 401.

Morrisburg is on the St. Lawrence River about 25 miles west of Cornwall.

'IT BLEW APART'

Sabotage Eyed In Jet Crash

BLOSSBURG, Pa. (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation was asked to investigate a "strong suggestion of sabotage" Friday night after a jetliner crashed into the side of a mountain, killing the 34 persons on board.

The request of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover was made by Robert E. Peach, president of Mohawk Airlines, owner of the BAC-111 which crashed on a flight to Washington, D.C.

In a telegram to Hoover Friday night, Peach said "evidence has developed in course of notification of next of kin of crash victims which leads to strong suggestion of sabotage."

He did not give any details.

The plane, Flight 40 from Syracuse, N.Y., plunged in a ball of flames onto Blossburg Mountain in north central Pennsylvania at 2:50 p.m., shortly after it took off in overcast from Elmira, N.Y.

Residents of Blossburg, a town of 1,956, about 30 miles south of Corning, N.Y., said they could tell the airliner was in trouble as it flew over.

"It sounded like the engine kept cutting out," one man said. Louis Schultz said he saw the plane's left wing on fire and pieces of debris falling off.

"It was making a noise like a whistle," he said. "It was just like a toy going down sideways."

Schultz later visited the crash scene and said the fuselage was gone, "just as if someone had stuck some dynamite in the centre and blew it to pieces."

NIAGARA IMPRESSES RED LEADER

'Are There Any Fish in River?'

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP)—Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin took a look at the American and Horseshoe Falls from an excursion steamer and a high observation tower today and then asked: "Are there any fish in the river?"

Kosygin flew here on a surprise visit because, his aide said, he wanted to see one of the seven natural wonders of the world.

Shortly after his arrival in a U.S. air force jet plane from New York City, Kosygin was taken to the Prospect Point observation tower of the American Falls.

He and his party, which included Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin, descended to the base of the American Falls. Kosygin walked to the Maid of the Mist landing and waved to tourists embarking on a Lower Niagara River run to the base of the Horseshoe Falls—half in Canada and half in the United States.

It was at this point he asked whether there were any fish in the river and was informed that there were.

About 15 minutes later, a second excursion boat crossed the river from Canada and Kosygin and his party boarded it. The boat proceeded past the American Falls and to the base of the Horseshoe Falls.

Kosygin wore a rain coat with hood to protect him from spray. He did not put the hood on his head until the heavy spray from the falls drenched all aboard.

Back on shore, Kosygin rode to the top of the 218-foot observation tower and overlooked the cataracts. Through an interpreter, he was told by Mayor E. Dent Lackey of the history of the falls and how the U.S. and Canada control the water spillage over the brinks for electricity production.

Kosygin's next stop was at Prospect Point, adjacent to the American Falls. He stood at the site of a gigantic rock slide in 1954. Another smaller slide occurred to his right May 11 last.

From the falls, Kosygin drove five miles north to the Niagara Power Project, one of the largest in the world. From there he planned to lunch at a Niagara Falls restaurant.

One o' th' benefits o' these face-t'-face talks is thet both men kin see t' other ain't got horns.

Ever notice thet th' Middle West an' th' Far West never make as much trouble as th' Middle East an' th' Far East?

LBJ Sparks Rioting By 10,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lines of club-holding police clashed with thousands of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators here Friday night outside a hotel where President Johnson addressed a $1,000-a-couple Democratic party fund-raising affair.

Thirty were arrested and several were injured as officers cleared the crowd from the street.

Johnson, who came in through a rear basement entrance, did not see any of the estimated 10,000 demonstrators who marched from a neargy park.

The demonstration was the result of weeks of planning by 70 anti-war groups.

The demonstrators gathered in a park about a mile from the hotel where Johnson spoke.

Some 1,500 police deployed in the hotel area.

BLOCK ENTRANCE

At 5 p.m. a crowd of about 100 blocked the hotel sidewalk. When a police officer said they were an unlawful assembly 21 lay down and had to be carried away.

Cassius Clay, who lost recognition in the U.S. of his world heavyweight boxing championship because he refused to be drafted into the U.S. Army, addressed the crowd at the park.

"Anything designed for peace and to stop the killing of people, I'm for 1,000 per cent," said Clay, who had flown in from Chicago.

The thousands massed in the park began marching on the hotel at about 7 p.m. Some hippies carried smoking sticks of incence clenched in their teeth. One girl in shorts had a live green snake around her neck.

LANDED IN LOT

Most of the marchers, with Dr. Benjamin Spock, noted pediatrician, in the van, were a few blocks from the hotel as President Johnson arrived by helicopter in a parking lot and was whisked inside.

An hour later massed police watched as some of the thousands of marchers spilled out into the street toward them.

"I command you to disperse or you will be arrested," said a police captain.

The demonstrators kept coming. Swinging clubs, police moved in and split the crowd. Fists swung. Rocks pelted the officers.

Within an hour, police had cleared the area, making 30 more arrests.

"The message is now clear," Police Chief Tom Redding said afterwards. "Lawbreakers are not going to take over this city."

Five-Year Term

DALLAS (UPI) — Frank Roswell Moorman III, 24, convicted on five counts of failing to report for induction into the U.S. army, was sentenced to five years in prison Friday.

The Conservatives were gaining in rural Quebec while NDP strength was in the major cities. This urban strength was causing "great concern."

"I do have, I think, some ability to attract votes from the NDP that other candidates don't have," he said.

Asked why, he replied this was hard but "people say I don't sound like a Conservative."

He said the NDP will not remain for long the party of labor, and is moving into the "idealistic middle class."

"You are not going to handle idealistic people by shouting Socialism at them," he said.

NO HANDOUTS

The way to fight, he said, is to put forth more practical alternatives, away from the "handout philosophy" and towards self help programs.

He cited the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act as a move to get rural people to come together to help themselves.

For 50 years, he said, the Conservatives have been a party of businessmen, originally 500 to 600 but now five or six who wanted the party to be spokesman for the business class.

But the party needed non-Conservative votes as well to get elected and "I don't want to belong to a closed club." He pointed to his frequent meetings with prominent union officials, often left-wingers.

Just recently he had a meeting with two prominent B.C. union leaders—Roy Smith of the longshoremen and Syd Thompson of the woodworkers.

Mr. Hamilton, a personal friend and long-time political ally of Conservative leader John Diefenbaker, said he doesn't know what the chief's plans are for the leadership contest.

But he could speculate—that if the chief doesn't think any of the candidates is doing a good job pulling the party together, then he might be a candidate.

But Mr. Hamilton said he will not withdraw if Mr. Diefenbaker runs, nor if Manitoba Premier Roblin enters the race.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Iwasaki, formerly of Salt Spring

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver lawyers with a $1,500,000 centennial project will try this summer to remove a "real blotch on Canada's centennial conscience."

That's the price Ray McLeod and Donald Small are placing on the rights of Mr. and Mrs. Torazo Iwasaki, who had their Salt Spring Island property confiscated more than 25 years ago following their evacuation to the B.C. interior as security risks.

And the lawyers have given the Canadian government until July 20 to clear the country's conscience or face a court battle.

Shortly after Japan entered the Second World War, Iwasaki, his son and his wife were among some 20,000 West Coast Japanese moved to Greenwood as security risks.

TWO PAYMENTS

The family eventually received $13,015.99 in two payments for their 640-acre tract of land on the gulf island.

Mr. Iwasaki, now 81, came to Canada in 1901 and returned to Japan 13 years later to get married. The young couple returned to B.C. in 1918 and by 1940 had made full payment of $3,950 on their island property.

Two years later, he was given enough time to pack two suitcases before he and his wife and son were put on a train for a government holding camp for Japanese in the interior.

He was a naturalized citizen at the time.

Mr. McLeod said his client's property was placed in control of government custodian Gavin C. Mouat who died in 1961. In 1945 the land was conveyed to Salt Spring Lands Ltd. which was under the presidency of Mr. Mouat.

CHECK REFUSED

Two years later Mr. Iwasaki refused to accept a $4,932.99 cheque for the sale of his land on the northwest side of the island. He returned the cheque to the secretary of state.

After a year, he received a government reply and a cheque for the same amount which he was told to keep "because that was all he was going to get," Mr. McLeod said.

But Mr. Iwasaki continued his fight through the federal property claims commission, demanding $66,000. Mr. McLeod said his client was given $8,083.

The two Vancouver lawyers took over Mr. Iwasaki's case in January after several unsuccessful years of appeals to Victoria and Ottawa.

REAL BLOTCH

"This is a real blotch on the conscience of Canada," Mr. McLeod said. "It has been swept under the carpet for 25 years. These people staked their lives on Canada and in 24 hours were reduced to prisoners with only two handbags."

He said much of the property has been subdivided and many lots have been sold for as much as $4,000 each. He described the land value as "about $1,500,000" at present day values.

LAND COMPANY

"There was a double conveyance from the (government) custodian to the secretary of state and back to the land company, of which the custodian was president, without consulting the owner," Mr. McLeod said.

He said that if the government turns down the appeal, he will have the case filed in court by September.

"We know we have a jungle of technicalities to get through but we propose to go ahead with it."

Secretary of State Judy LaMarsh told the lawyers May 25 the case was not under her jurisdiction and that it had been referred to Registrar General John Turner.

Mr. MacLeod says he has not yet received a reply from Mr. Turner.

BRIEF ITEM

Moscow radio carried only a brief comment for Russian listeners. It simply said that the two leaders met "in Glassboro, N.J., near New York" and that "the meeting was suggested by President Johnson."

Radio Peking lost no time in accusing both powers of directly planning "a great conspiracy on a worldwide basis."

At the United Nations diplomats took the continuation of the talks as in itself an encouraging sign.

It was a hot muggy day, cooled inside the 22-room old residence by 16 air conditioners installed only Thursday night.

While the president and the Soviet premier were alone, Rusk, Gromyko, defence secretary Robert McNamara and others were at work.

Differences remained on a renewed arms race in the Middle East, on solving the festering sore of more than 1,000,000 Arab refugees and for freedom of navigation in the Gulf of Aqaba.

Nor was there any evidence that the Soviets had persuaded the U.S. to halt its military escalation against North Vietnam or that the U.S. gained an inch in explaining why it is fighting in Southeast Asia.

She's Sally Jane Spencer, a pace-setter with a two-foot wide hat and a two-foot short mini-dress. The meeting is in its third day.

Stevens Leaves Prison For New Court Hearing

VANCOUVER — Homer Stevens moved from Oakalla Prison to the lawyers' table in B.C. Supreme Court chambers Friday, as yet another aspect of the complicated fishing situation began unfolding.

Owners of four Vancouver fishing boats claimed in court that the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union prevented the vessels from going halibut fishing in order to force the owners to meet union terms in a proposed trawl-fishing agreement.

The owners, represented by lawyer Glen McMaster, seek an injunction forcing the union to lift its halibut fishing ban, and also are suing the union for damages.

H. E. Hutcheon, representing the union, submitted to Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere that the owners are responsible because they locked out the halibut crews.

The judge was told the dispute arises out of stalled negotiations over the signing of an agreement to cover trawl-fishing crews who work on a share-the-catch basis. When the trawl fishing season ended, the same boats were eligible to change rigging to long-line gear for halibut.

The boats have been tied up since March.

UFAWU secretary Stevens, sentenced to a year in jail last week for contempt of court after failing to obey an earlier injunction, is appearing on his own behalf in the current injunction application. He sat Friday with lawyers Hutcheon and McMaster.

Union president H. (Steve) Stavenes and business agent Jack Nichol, both sentenced with Stevens, were given permission Friday to attend court Monday when the hearing resumes.
